PM invokes 9/11 to call for strong action against terror 'promoters'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

HITTING OUT at Pakistan without naming it, Prime Minister Narendra Modi Wednesday said that India is capable of tackling the challenge of terrorism but the world needs to take "strong action" against those who "promote" terror and "provide protection and training" to terrorists.

Addressing a gathering in Mathura to launch an animal disease control programme and a cleanliness initiative, the Prime Minister also called for a ban on single-use plastic and took a dig at critics who get "rattled" by words like "Om" and "cow".

Referring to the 9/11 attacks one that "shook" the world, Modi said: "Today, terrorism has become an ideology, which is not restricted by any boundaries. It has become a global problem whose strong roots are being nurtured in our neighbourhood. The entire world needs to take a resolution, to take strong action against those who promote this ideology and provide protection

SRINAGAR, SEPTEMBER 11

ANNOUNCING THAT a Lashkar-e-Toiba (LeT) militant involved in a recent attack on a fruit merchant's home in Sopore was gunned down in an encounter, Jammu and Kashmir DGP Dilbag Singh said Wednesday that there were "many reports" of cross-border infiltration which police were trying to verify.

"Yes, there have been many reports of infiltration being attempted in certain areas, Rajouri and Poonch they tried, Gurez they tried, Kamah and Keran they tried, Gulmarg sector they tried... there are reports ... there is no denying the fact... and we are trying to confirm them," Singh said at a press conference in Srinagar.

"But with the kind of activity across the Line of Control or IB (International Border), where a largescale build-up is seen, largescale militants are brought to the launching pads, certainly those kinds of attempts are being made."

LAST FRIDAY, Pulwama resident Ghulam reached Agra to meet his son, a 35-year-old preacher who has been lodged in the Central Jail since the first week of August. But the long journey via Srinagar and New Delhi ended in disappointment for Ghulam, who says he did not have a verification letter from J&K Police that the jail officials wanted.

Ghulam's son is among 285 persons who have been arrested from the Kashmir Valley and detained in UP — 85 in Agra alone — after the central government scrapped J&K's special status under Article 370 on August 5. The

Site decided, Govt clears mega solar project in Leh and Kargil

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE DECKS have been cleared for a Rs 50,000 crore grid-connected solar photo-voltaic project spread across Leh and Kargil districts — the single biggest investment proposal in the region since Ladakh was designated as a Union Territory.

Union Power Minister RK Singh told The Indian Express that the Centre has finalised the sites for the solar project, alongside the implementation details of a crucial transmission link to ensure the viability of the project. Pang, about 117 km from Leh, has been finalised as the revised site for a major chunk of the 7,500 MW solar project after an earlier proposed site ran foul of environmental norms.

Additionally, the project has been rendered viable by segregating the crucial transmission corridor for evacuation of electricity from the overall project package, as against a combined package under a single tender that was being offered earlier.

The transmission link has been routed via Manali in Himachal Pradesh and further to Kaithal in Haryana to ensure that electricity can be feasibly wheeled from the proposed project — billed as the country's biggest solar project in capacity terms.

The renewable energy ministry plans to eventually scale it up to a 23,000 MW grid-connected Ultra Mega Solar PV project in Ladakh, with the 7,500 MW package forming the first part of the larger project.

STILL NO OPTION FOR ON-THE-SPOT PAYMENT

No plan to dilute MV Act and reduce road fines, says Transport Minister

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE DELHI government is "not mulling to dilute" penalties for offences under the Motor Vehicles Amendment Act 2019, as they are meant to ensure road safety, Transport Minister Kailash Gahlot said Wednesday.

The government will take a call on reducing the rates only when it is convinced that such a step is required, Gahlot told a press conference.

However, he did not commit to any timeline by which the Delhi government plans to notify the compoundable offences under the Act to enable on-the-spot cash payment of challans. In the absence of such a notification, enforcement agencies are having to issue court challans for every type of offence.

The amended MV Act came into force on September 1. It is learnt that the Delhi Transport Department had recommended to the minister immediately after the law came into effect that Delhi should stick to the compoundable rates fixed by the Centre.

Gahlot said that under the amended motor vehicle law, states have discretionary powers to revise the rates of 26 types of compoundable offences. Penalties have gone up in cases of 63 violations under the law.

Asked about the Gujarat government's decision to slash penalties, Gahlot said the Delhi government has not yet gone through any notification in this regard so far.

"We are consulting the public, officials, stakeholders. This issue is essentially connected to road safety. We are taking feedback from all concerned. Though the state governments have certain discretionary powers to ease the penalties with respect to certain offences as per the new MV Act, as of now the Delhi government is not mulling to dilute them, since the stringent measures are meant to ensure road safety.

"We are closely observing the initiatives by other states as well as consulting with various stakeholders. At any stage, if the Delhi government is convinced to reduce the penalties for certain offences, we shall do the needful," Gahlot said.

After the Act was implemented, sources in the Delhi government had indicated that it was open to revising the rates. It had pointed out that when the MV Act was last amended in the late 1980s, the city government had gradually, in several phases, made the transition to the new compoundable rates.

Section 200 of the amended MV Act empowers states to issue a gazette notification for compounding of certain offences, while also specifying the ranks of the officers empowered to challan various types of viola-

Pollution checking centres come up at 37 bus depots

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

TO TACKLE the "three-fold" increase in applications at the capital's pollution-checking centres, the Delhi government has made pollution-checking services available at 37 bus depots and five terminals of the Delhi Transport Corporation (DTC).

As per official data, from an average of 15,000 applications per day, the number of applications has risen to 45,000. There are 941 PUC (pollution under control) centres in Delhi.

With the penalty for not having a valid PUC certificate rising to Rs 10,000 from Rs 1,000 under the amended Motor Vehicles Act, vehicle owners have been rushing to the centres in large numbers, leading to long queues and Long lines at a PUC centre. The number of applications per day has risen to 45,000 from 15,000 earlier. Archive technical glitches, as the existing infrastructure struggles to handle the load.

PUC certificates need to be obtained every three months in Delhi and every six months in NCR. For BS-IV vehicles, the certificate is needed once a year. The capital has approximately 70 lakh registered vehicles, excluding the over 15-year-old petrol and over 10-year-old diesel vehicles.

Before opening temporary PUC centres at the depots and terminals, the government had extended the operational timings of the centres, making them functional from 7 am to 10 pm.

"Even the server capacity has been increased nearly twice. Now the transport department can handle 6,000 online applications per hour, as compared to 3,200 applications per hour earlier," Delhi Transport Minister Kailash Gahlot said.

Gahlot added the government will also accept applications for new PUC centres from September 12.

"At centres with extreme rush, civil defense volunteers will be deployed for crowd management and to avert law and order issues," Gahlot said, naming 10 centres handling an average of 2,200 applications per day.

Domestic help falls to death from 16th floor of Gurgaon condo

GURGAON, SEPTEMBER 11

A 19-YEAR-OLD woman, who worked as a domestic help with a family at a gated condominium in Gurgaon, fell to her death from the sixteenth floor balcony of her employers' home.

Police suspect she committed suicide, though no suicide note has been retrieved from her or the house.

Police said the incident took place around 10.30 pm on Tuesday at M3M Merlin Drive, a gated condominium in Gurgaon's Sector 67 along the Golf Course Extension Road.

The woman hailed from Uttar Pradesh's Bareilly and had been working at the house for the last 20-25 days, police said. Her employer, police said, is a pilot with a private airline, and lives with his wife and four-year-old child.

"The woman was primarily employed to take care of the child... Her body was discovered by the condominium's staff. She was rushed to a private hospital, but was declared dead on arrival," said Gurgaon Police PRO Subhash Boken.

The woman was found dead by the condominium staff on Tuesday night. Police said an FIR has not been lodged since her family does not suspect any foul play

The post-mortem was conducted on Wednesday afternoon, and her body has been handed over to her relatives. In the absence of a suicide note and her family not raising concerns about foul play, police said no FIR has been registered.

"Basic investigation has been conducted by personnel at Sector 65 police station. It appears to be a case of suicide, although the reason is unknown so far. The family has not raised any objections or expressed any concerns regarding foul play," said Boken. "They have not submitted any complaint."

Be more inclusive for special needs kids, city schools told

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

NOTING IRREGULARITIES in admission to children with special needs, the education department has ordered private schools in the city to “implement inclusive education”, threatening them with penalties if they don’t comply. The order, issued on August 28, calls on schools to comply with provisions of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (RPWD) Act, 2016, which guarantees inclusive education to children with disabilities in all educational institutes.

The Act directs that the government and local authorities endeavour that all schools run and recognised by them provide inclusive education, and it lists the duties of educational institutes. These include admitting them without discrimination; making buildings, campus and various facilities accessible; and providing necessary support “individualised or otherwise”.

The order also refers to a 2013 Delhi High Court order which asks all schools to make their premises barrier-free, and gave them two years to appoint special educators. The court had also ordered that “no school shall refuse admission to children with disability for the reason of not employing Special Educators or not providing barrier free access in the school premises”.

The circular noted that despite the order and the provisions of the Act, irregularities in admissions to children with special needs have been noted. “We receive a variety of complaints from parents... Many are discouraged by schools from admitting their children citing that they do not have the facilities. There are cases in which schools may be inclusive for one particular disability but say they are ill-equipped for another... There needs to be a strategy to deal with this issue,” said State Commissioner for Persons with Disabilities T D Dhariyal.

The education department has directed principals of all recognised private schools to examine the admission records of 2017-2018 and 2018-2019 to ensure that all admissions under the CWSN category have been carried out according to guidelines, and that admitted students are being provided with “effective inclusive education” as per RPWD Act. Schools are required to reserve 3% seats at entry-level for children with special needs, admissions to which are conducted through centralised draw of lots.

On Wednesday, The Indian Express had reported that DPS Dwarka had denied admission to two children, including an autistic six-year old boy, who had been allotted the school through draw of lots, citing that its existing infrastructure rendered their admission unfeasible.

CM exchanges notes on crop burning with envoy from Iran

Kejriwal with Chegeni Wednesday

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

DELHI Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal met Iran’s Ambassador to India Ali Chegeni Wednesday, and discussed various issues such as pollution, health and education. “The envoy pointed out that smog which Delhi faces during the winters, was a problem in Tehran too and the two cities should hold discussions and learn from each other on how to mutually resolve issues,” said a statement issued by the government.

Officials said the two discussed the similarities between Tehran and Delhi at the meeting, which was also attended by Delhi Deputy Chief Minister Manish Sisodia and Health Minister Satyendar Jain. “Had a productive discussion with the Ambassador of Iran to India, Dr Ali Chegeni on a range of issues including healthcare, education. Learned from Dr Chegeni that like Delhi, Tehran also faced incoming smog due to crop burning. Shared experiences of both capital cities in reducing pollution,” Kejriwal tweeted.

The Iranian ambassador elaborated on the governance structure of Tehran and the relationship of the city’s mayor with the Iran government, the statement said, adding he also talked about the need to tackle air pollution.

Later in the day, Kejriwal said in a tweet that there will be no “VIP culture” in government hospitals. “I have directed the Health Dept to end VIP culture in government hospitals. No more private rooms for VIPs. All citizens will get equal treatment, but it will be of the best quality,” he tweeted.

Cop booked over techie’s death during checking

NOIDA, SEPTEMBER 11

A TRAFFIC constable has been booked in connection with the death of a software engineer who died of a heart attack during police checking Sunday.

Gaurav Sharma (35) was stopped by a constable for a traffic violation, shortly after which he collapsed, said police.

“An FIR has been filed under IPC section 304 (A) (death by negligence) against an unknown constable in connection with the incident. The family has written to us saying the policeman could have saved Gaurav’s life since he collapsed in front of him. We are investigating the case,” said Shloka Kumar, SP City.

Gaurav’s family alleged that on Sunday, the traffic personnel hit their car with sticks to stop it, and misbehaved with Gaurav and his parents.

As Gaurav stepped out, he collapsed. He was later declared dead on arrival at the hospital.

“The policeman disappeared as Gaurav collapsed. We don’t want something like this happening to anybody,” claimed Vaibhav, Gaurav’s brother. Police are also conducting an enquiry into the conduct of the traffic constable during the incident.

Set up bio-parks on floodplains by 2020 or pay fine, DDA told

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE DELHI Development Authority (DDA) will be liable to pay Rs 5 lakh per month as penalty if it does not complete demarcation and fencing of Yamuna floodplains, and developing biodiversity parks there by April 2020, said an order passed by the National Green Tribunal. The NGT bench, led by chairperson Justice Adarsh Kumar Goel, also directed DDA to ensure that cultivation of crops is not undertaken on the floodplains.

The directive came after the NGT-appointed Yamuna monitoring committee submitted its reports to the tribunal, regarding the status of work being done by authorities for preventing pollution of the river and re-juvenating it.

“The DDA is directed to undertake the work of restoration of floodplains so that they perform the requisite ecological functions,” the bench said. It added that an action plan with timelines has to be submitted by the DDA to the monitoring committee within a month.

A fresh deadline of December 31, 2020, has also been set for governments of Delhi, Haryana, UP and other agencies, for completing pending projects aimed at preventing pollution of the river, except in cases where an earlier deadline has been set. “Failing to do so may invite criminal prosecution,” the NGT said.

The tribunal also noted that “environmental pollution and destruction of Yamuna” is a direct consequence of haphazard growth in unauthorised colonies.

It said that in the last 20 years, unchecked expansion of unauthorised colonies has led to haphazard proliferation of vast habitations bereft of roads, drainage or sewerage. “No amount of STPs and professional management inputs, repair of drains and interception of sewage will result in making the Yamuna cleaner unless the most major among the causes of pollution are confronted,” the bench said.

It also added that laying sewer lines and drains need to be forecast and attended to well in advance to avoid the present situation in which most unauthorised colonies have no outlet for sewage.

The tribunal issued the directions while hearing an application filed by Manoj Misra, convener of the Yamuna Jiye Abhiyan.

Campaigning time over in DU — but not for Delhi BJP chief

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

CAMPAIGNING FOR DUSU polls was not allowed Wednesday as per the Model Code of Conduct (MCC), but that did not stop Delhi BJP chief Manoj Tiwari from campaigning for the Akhil Bharatiya Vidyarthi Parishad.

Tiwari visited Vivek Vihar near Vivekananda College Wednesday where he asked students to vote for ABVP. He also visited several hostels, including Aparna Hostel.

Congress's National Students' Union of India (NSUI) said they will likely file a complaint with the Election Committee.

A video of the interaction was shared by Tiwari himself on Twitter, in which he could be seen campaigning in support of ABVP. "What could be better than this video in which daughters of Vivekanand College are giving a clear message to anti-national forces," he tweeted along with the video.

In the 30 second video, Tiwari can be seen chanting ABVP's ballot numbers, 1,5,3,4 in Hindi, to which students respond with 'ABVP ab ki bar'. In the end, Tiwari says, "Vote and support for ABVP panel."

Tiwari told The Indian Express he was passing through the college area when he saw some children and got down. "The children were very happy to see me and gathered around," he said.

Chief Election Officer (CEO) Ashok Prasad had Tuesday issued a notice which said, "All concerned may please note and ensure that the canvassing for the DUSU elections 2019-20 will stop at 8 pm of September 10."

NSUI said Tiwari visited Pearl Banquet, around 5 km from the college. "He went and canvassed at Pearl Banquet, which is a violation of code of conduct. Plus ABVP says they are not part of BJP, then why is state president BJP doing rounds?" said NSUI national media coordinator Neeraj Mishra.

HC notice to varsity after 3 claim stopped from filing nomination

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE DELHI High Court Wednesday sought to know Delhi University's stand on a plea by three students, alleging that they were illegally restrained by suspected members of the ABVP from filing their nominations for polls to the post of office bearers of the DU Students' Union (DUSU).

The students belong to the Students' Federation of India and All India Students' Federation.

The HC, however, refrained itself from postponing the DUSU polls, scheduled for Thursday.

Justice Sanjeev Sachdev expressed displeasure over alleged acts of violence on campus, and asked DU to file its response by the next date of hearing, October 17. The court also issued notice to DU, its Chief Election Officer (CEO) and SHO of Maurice Nagar police station on the petition, seeking necessary action on the students' complaint filed with the varsity and police subsequent to the incident.

The court did not allow the students to file their nominations for the upcoming DUSU polls, observing that the polls were due to be held the next day.

Students from 52 DU colleges will vote today. Archive

The petition, filed by DU students Ravi Kumar Chauhan, Noel Benny and Parmanand Sharma, through their counsel Anuj Kapoor and Devyani Bhatt, alleged that on September 4, they were "prevented by suspected members of ABVP" from submitting their nomination papers at the CEO's office. September 4 was the last date to file nominations.

The counsel apprised the court that one of the students, who is visually impaired, was overpowered by the miscreants and his papers were snatched. When they again tried to submit their nominations, they were obstructed.

The plea claimed that police officers did not intervene despite heavy deployment.

After last yr's poll drama, DU deploys observers in colleges

ARANYA SHANKAR
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

AFTER COUNTING for the Delhi University Students' Union (DUSU) polls was suspended for over five hours last year following allegations of faulty EVMs, the university is determined not to take any chances this time.

As DU goes to polls today, an observer and a technical staff will be deployed at every college to look into any hiccup. Chief Election Officer Ashok Prasad told The Indian Express that this is being done for the first time.

"We will be deputing one observer and one technical staff at all 52 colleges which are going to vote. This is just a precautionary measure. There is always 0.01 % chance that something can go wrong, so someone should be there. It happens sometimes in parliamentary and assembly elections," said Prasad.

The observers would be faculty members, Prasad added.

Last year, for the first time, counting was suspended as the Congress's National Students' Union of India (NSUI) alleged that one of the EVMs was showing a ballot number which had no candidate.

Some violence had ensued when members of the NSUI and Akhil Bharatiya Vidyarthi Parishad (ABVP) were not allowed to leave the counting centre, following which counting was suspended, and began only at 5:30 pm.

After the results were declared, ABVP won the posts of president, vice-president and joint secretary while the NSUI won the post of general secretary.

Elections today will see the ABVP and NSUI going head to head on all four seats. For the post of president, Akshit Dahiya is up against NSUI's Chetna Tyagi.

The All India Students' Association (AISA) is the third player in the game. Last year, they had allied with the Aam Aadmi Party's Chhatra Yuva Sangharsh Samiti (CYSS). This year, however, they are fighting it out alone.

CYSS, which has said they will not contest until DU polls are held on paper ballot, have asked students to boycott the polls. Meanwhile, ABVP has appealed to students not to waste votes by pressing the NOTA button.

Counting for the DUSU polls will be held Friday.

Day after raid at Hany Babu home, students and profs protest on campus

Outside the Arts Faculty in North Campus, Wednesday

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

STUDENTS AND colleagues of Delhi University English professor Dr Hany Babu Wednesday protested at the Arts Faculty against the police search at his house in connection with the Elgaar Parishad case. Eight teachers of the English department also released a statement condemning the search.

The teachers include Heads of Department Raj Kumar, Rimli Bhattacharya, Tapan Basu, Prasanta Chakravarty, Subarno Chattarji, Priya Kumar, Ira Raja and Haris Qadeer. The teachers said they were "shocked and outraged at the sudden and unexplained raid". They claimed that while the search was on, Babu, his wife Jenny Rowena who teaches English at Miranda House, and their daughter were "prevented from communicating with any of their neighbours or friends".

"Dr Hany Babu is a respected academic with impeccable professional credentials. We strongly condemn the invasion of privacy of an individual and his family without any legal document, and further, his undue intimidation and seizing from his home his precious teaching and research material, as being violative of the norms of any law-abiding and democratic society," they said.

At Arts Faculty, several students taught by Babu as well as his peers from other colleges came to express solidarity. The idea of a student-teacher defence committee for Babu was also floated.

Iqra Raza, a final-year English MA student who had come for the protest, said Babu was not just a great teacher, but an "amazing human being".

"He teaches us linguistics. In his lectures, he always presses on the idea of equality."

Shivam Verma, another student, described Babu as a "professor par excellence". "For a teacher, his life and work is in the laptop and hard disks. Not just his own, but years of research work of students would be in those files. It's really sad that they went after all these things and his books. We students also have so many books, are we also criminals?"

Karen Gabriel, who teaches English at St Stephens' College, said the recent trend was to brand everyone an urban naxal. "We need to prepare ourselves for worse that is to come. There is a pattern emerging against intellectuals who speak up for the marginalised... If they had not found books at Hany Babu's home, that would have been a problem, not that there were books. I don't think we should be apologetic about what we think and do. We should recommit ourselves to campaign for the right to speak and think," she said.

Ira Raja, Babu's colleague who also signed the statement, said she found it "bizarre" that libraries of professors were being targeted. "Now simply reading books is a problem. The kind of book you read has itself become incriminating," she said.

The JNU Teachers' Association also released a statement in support of Babu.

Civic body official 'assault': AAP MLA gets court relief

New Delhi: A Delhi court has granted interim protection from arrest to AAP MLA from Model Town Akhilesh Pati Tripathi, who was booked for allegedly manhandling an MCD inspector. Special judge Ajay Kumar Kuhar directed Delhi Police not to take any coercive action against the MLA till the next date of hearing, September 13.

Tripathi was booked by the Delhi Police for allegedly assaulting an MCD inspector, Ravinder Kumar Gupta, who said he was supervising cleaning work at Azadpur area on September 5, 2019, when the incident took place. ENS

DELHI CONFIDENTIAL

FOCUS STATES

IN THE RSS's recent coordination meeting in Pushkar, its work in the states of Tamil Nadu and Punjab were specially discussed. The RSS considers its work at the grassroots in these two states to be weak in comparison to other states. The agenda of the meeting had a mention of this discussion. Sources said that Sah-Sarkaryawah Manmohan Vaidya and the Tamil Nadu sanghchalak presented brief statements on Punjab and Tamil Nadu, respectively, which was followed by discussion and suggestions.

GREEN INITIATIVE

A GROUP of five National Law School of India University graduates, including former ambassador to the US Navtej Sarna's son Satyajit Sarna, have initiated a move to float a political party that will prioritise environmental concerns of the 21st century above all else. The Green Justice Party of India has begun an online membership drive before registering the party with the Election Commission.

ANOTHER GLITCH

THE VANDE Bharat Express has again encountered technical glitches. It is said that a lightning arrester burst a few days ago, leading to a delay en route to Delhi. The problem happened again a couple of days later. Now, it has been decided to run the train through another section as Railways says the fault is in the overhead equipment in a particular section. Some officials are sensing departmental wrangling in deciding what actually ails the showpiece train and how the organisation addresses it.

PANEL DELAY

IT HAS been some time since the new Lok Sabha MPs took oath, and they are now one session old. However, Parliamentary standing committees are yet to be constituted. The matter caused much consternation during the session — with the Opposition accusing the government of subverting Parliament and the government maintaining that it was the Opposition parties' tardiness in giving names for the committees that had caused the delay. It is unconventional for the committees to not be in place by the beginning of September.

UN chief steers clear on J&K: Engage through dialogue

SHUBHAJIT ROY
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

UNITED NATIONS Secretary General Antonio Guterres has, once again, refused to get drawn into the J&K situation and appealed to India and Pakistan to engage on the issue "through dialogue". Guterres, however, expressed concern about any potential escalation between the two sides.

The Secretary General's position was made clear after Pakistan's Permanent Representative to the UN Maleeha Lodhi met him in New York.

Responding to questions about possible mediation, Guterres' spokesperson told reporters in New York: "Our position on mediation has, as a matter of principle, has always remained the same. The Secretary-General has had contacts both with the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India. He saw the Prime

EXPLAINED
Toeing UNSC line

LAST MONTH, informal closed-door consultations on Kashmir took place at the UN Security Council, which ended without the UNSC taking a stand. Taking a cue from the Council's permanent members, the Secretary General has not yet waded into the diplomatic tussle between India and Pakistan.

Minister of India at the sidelines of the G7 not long ago. He had spoken to the Foreign Minister of Pakistan. Yesterday, at her request, he met with the Permanent Representative of Pakistan in his office."

The spokesperson said: "His message to all of them has been the same, both publicly and privately, that he remains very concerned about any potential escalation between India and Pakistan over the situation. He appeals to both sides to deal with the issue through dialogue. And, as was said by the High Commissioner for Human Rights recently, the situation in Kashmir can only be solved with the full respect of human rights."

Modi met Guterres in Biarritz on the sidelines of the G-7 meeting on August 26, and laid out India's basic position on the issue that it is an "internal matter" and Article 370 is under the Indian Constitution. On the international front, Modi told Guterres that "no step has been taken by India in any way or form to threaten the regional peace and stability".

UN Secretary General's spokesperson's comments came a day after the latest war of words between India and Pakistan at the United Nations Human Rights Council, just two weeks before the Prime Ministers of both are to speak at the UN General Assembly in New York on September 27.

Hours after Pakistan called on the UNHRC to not remain "indifferent" after India revoked J&K's special status under Article 370, New Delhi hit out at Islamabad for "misusing" the platform for "malicious political agendas under the garb of human rights".

Pakistan has now claimed that it has prepared a joint statement on behalf of over 50 countries, which says they share the concern expressed by the High Commissioner for Human Rights Michelle Bachelet on the impact of India's J&K decision on the rights of people in Kashmir. However, it has not yet disclosed the names of the countries that are signatories to the statement.

Vaiko files habeas corpus plea in SC, says unable to contact Farooq

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

RAJYA SABHA MP Vaiko on Wednesday approached the Supreme Court with a habeas corpus plea seeking production of Lok Sabha MP and former Jammu and Kashmir Chief Minister Farooq Abdullah, who he claimed is not being allowed to attend a seminar organised in Chennai.

Vaiko, also general secretary of the MDMK party, petitioned that he is organising a conference in Chennai on September 5 on the occasion of the birth anniversary of former Tamil Nadu Chief Minister CN Annadurai "in the spirit of peaceful democratic debate and discussion so as to strengthen the unity and integrity of India".

He mentioned that he has been organising the event for many years, and that political leaders from across the country are taking part in it. According to the petition, Abdullah was invited and had agreed to attend the event.

Vaiko submitted that the National Conference leader had attended previous editions of the conference. "However, on or around 05.08.2019, Dr Farooq Abdullah was placed under detention in Srinagar. Despite his efforts the Petitioner was unable to contact him," the petition stated.

Following this, Vaiko stated, he wrote to the Union government and the J&K administration, requesting them to allow Abdullah to travel to Chennai "in order to attend the conference in the interest of freedom of speech and in the spirit of encouraging democratic participation". But, he submitted, "the Respondents have failed to reply to the letter/representation, which by implication is a denial of permission".

The action of the respondents — the Centre and the J&K administration — are "completely illegal and arbitrary and violative of the right to protection of life and personal liberty, right to protection from arrest and detention, and also against right to free speech and expression which is the cornerstone of a democratic nation".

Vaiko contended that the Centre and the state administration have imposed an "undeclared emergency" in J&K and placed "an entire state in lockdown for the past one month and dealt a body-blow by arresting democratically elected representatives who were instrumental in strengthening democracy in the state".

The petition submitted: "This is a conflict between power and liberty and the constitutional courts of the land ought to act as a check and balance when the executive illegally usurps fundamental rights of lakhs of citizens instead of shielding the executive under the false pretext of national security and integrity.... The refusal... to allow Dr Farooq Abdullah to attend the peaceful and democratic conference organised by the Petitioner is illegal and arbitrary and violative of Articles 21, 22 and 19(1)(a) of the Constitution of India."

Through his plea, the Rajya Sabha MP urged the court to do the needful to enable Abdullah to attend the conference.

Wielding axe, Khattar tells supporter: Will chop off head

CHANDIGARH, SEPTEMBER 11

HOURS AFTER a video clip surfaced in which Haryana Chief Minister Manohar Lal Khattar is seen wielding an axe and threatening a party supporter that he will chop his head off, he justified his "anger" as "natural" because the worker had tried to place a silver crown on his head, a "culture of Congress" that he claimed BJP had done away with.

"We had stopped this culture of (accepting) crowns of silver and gold five years ago to save the hard-earned money of the public. If even today, any person, even my own worker, without my knowledge, places a silver crown on my head, its natural that I will be angry," he said Wednesday while addressing media here.

He was responding to the video clip that was first shared by AICC chief spokesperson and Kaithal MLA Randeep Singh Surjewala in the morning. Sharing the clip, purportedly recorded at Hansi in Hissar district, during Khattar's Jan Aashirwad Yatra, Surjewala, in a tweet said, "Gussa aur ahankar sehat ke liye haanikarak hai. Khattar sahab ko gussa kyun aata hai? Farsa lekar apne hi neta ko kehne hain 'gardan kaat dunga teri', phir janta ke saath kya karenge. (Anger and arrogance are not good for health. Why does Khattar sahab get angry? Wielding an axe, he tells his own party worker that I will chop your head off. What will he do with the public?)"

The video shows Khattar, aboard his yatra vehicle accepting an axe gifted to him by a supporter. As Khattar starts addressing the rally, a BJP leader tries to put a crown on his head. Khattar cut shorts his speech and addresses the leader. "Kya kar rahe ho? Gardan kaat dunga teri (What are you doing? I will cut off your head)," he is heard saying in the video.

The leader, later identified as a former member of the Haryana Staff Selection Commission (HSSC), is seen apologising to the CM with folded hands.

Addressing the press conference in the evening, Khattar said that the party leader had placed the silver crown on his head without his knowledge. He said he lost his cool as this was a "Congress culture" that he had done away with after taking charge as chief minister of Haryana in 2014.

"He is very old (BJP) worker and has been part of the government also. He did not take it (my anger) otherwise. We will not allow this culture of Congress in this party (BJP) and state again," Khattar further said.

State govt needs to work more seriously on law and order: Pilot

JAIPUR, SEPTEMBER 11

IN A veiled attack on Chief Minister Ashok Gehlot, Deputy CM Sachin Pilot on Wednesday said that the government needs to work "more seriously" on law and order in the state.

Asked about Leader of Opposition Gulab Chand Kataria questioning the government on law and order situation in the state, Pilot, talking to journalists, said, "As a leader of the opposition it is natural" that Kataria may have a reason "to attack the government but it is also true that we need to give more attention to law and order."

"The government is serious regarding the incidents which have taken place recently and we have also taken steps so that these things can be contained and are not repeated. And it is true that be it the incidents in Dholpur, Alwar or Behror, the law and order has been disturbed in the past few months and we should work more seriously on it," Pilot said.

Declare Ladakh a 'tribal area', recommends NCST

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE NATIONAL Commission for Scheduled Tribes (NCST) has sent a formal recommendation to the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) to declare Ladakh a "tribal area" in the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution.

The Commission on Wednesday wrote to Home Minister Amit Shah and Tribal Affairs Minister Arjun Munda, recommending the status that will allow the Centre to grant autonomous councils in the region on the pattern of the Northeast states.

The Sixth Schedule provides for the administration of tribal areas after setting up autonomous district and regional councils.

"The commission, after careful consideration, recommends that the Union Territory of Ladakh be brought under the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution... Accordingly, NCST chairperson (Nand Kumar Sai) has written to Home and Tribal Affairs Ministers conveying the recommendation," a statement issued by the NCST said.

According to the NCST, this will help "democratic devolution of powers, preserve and promote distinct culture of the region, protect agrarian rights including rights on land and enhance transfer of funds for speedy development of the region".

The NCST's recommendation comes against the backdrop of growing demand from a predominantly tribal population and political leaders of Ladakh for according "tribal area" status to the region. The Home Ministry is the central authority for declaring an area as a "tribal area".

In a memorandum to Tribal Affairs Minister Arjun Munda in August, BJP MP from Ladakh, Jamyang Tsering Namgyal, had said the region is a predominantly tribal area with tribals making up to 98 per cent of its population. "After the Centre announced its decision to make Ladakh a Union Territory, the biggest concern of the tribal population here is to protect its identity, culture, land and economy," he had said.

Patel's pain removed by another great son of Gujarat: Prasad on J&K

GANDHINAGAR, SEPTEMBER 11

UNION MINISTER of Law and Justice and Communications Ravi Shankar Prasad on Wednesday said that Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel's pain regarding Kashmir had been eliminated through "surgery" by "another great son of Gujarat" — Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

Addressing a gathering of people from 36 institutes of Ahmedabad at Dinesh Hall here, Prasad said the decision to scrap special status of Jammu and Kashmir was a "confidential project", and that he got to know about it just two days earlier.

"Today there is satisfaction about one fact. The pain of Sardar Patel regarding Kashmir has been cured through surgery by another great son of Gujarat, Narendra Modi," Prasad said, speaking at the event called 'Rashtriya Ekta Abhiyaan' organised by the Gujarat BJP.

Congratulating Modi on the moves regarding J&K, Prasad also gave credit to Home Minister Amit Shah for deftly "piloting the project".

"There are a number of holes once it was leaked, mischief was bound to be there," he said.

"I had been associated with the subject... I joined just two days prior. Amitbhai called me and said 'Law Minister, read this file'. After reading the file, I was startled. Because, ever since I joined the RSS in Class III, I had just heard the story of 'Jahan huye baidan Mukherjee, woh Kashmir hamara hain. And now, as Law Minister, I was to sign. I got emotional. He (Shah) said, 'Law Minister, is your pen working correctly? Take it out and sign it, we want to make history'."

Earlier in the day, Prasad addressed a press conference at Ahmedabad Management Association wherein he highlighted the achievements of the Modi-led government in the first 100 days of its second term. Here too, Prasad mentioned the abrogation of special status as the biggest achievement of the government. He said the decision was appreciated by a number of countries, and that even China had not openly objected to it. The decision is in the interest of Jammu and Kashmir and India, he said.

India, Prasad said that Patel was "right" and Jawaharlal Nehru was "wrong" in their approach towards Kashmir.

Prasad also spoke on other achievements of the Modi government, including the law banning instant triple talaq.

On the issue of employment, Prasad said that since September 2017, 2.75 crore persons have been added to the Employees' Provident Fund, which means that as many people have got jobs. He said that in 2014, there were only two mobile manufacturing companies in India, but now, there are 268 such companies.

MOTOR VEHICLES ACT

After Gujarat, Uttarakhand too slashes fines, others may follow

Uttarakhand became the second state after Gujarat to announce a cut in penalties for traffic violations introduced under the Centre's amended Motor Vehicles Act. Few states have adopted the Act in its entirety, while several states have put it on hold. The Indian Express looks at how the amended Act is being implemented across the country:

UTTARAKHAND PENALTIES CUT

The state government on Wednesday decided to adopt the amended Act but with cuts in penalties.

The state Cabinet decided that penalty of Rs 2,500 will be charged for allowing an unauthorised person to drive a vehicle, whereas the Centre had proposed penalty of Rs 5,000. Likewise, penalty for a person driving a vehicle without licence or a minor driving a vehicle at a public place will attract penalty of Rs 2,500, reduced from Rs 5,000 as proposed by the Centre.

If one who is disqualified from having a driving licence drives a vehicle at a public place, penalty of Rs 5,000 will imposed instead of Rs 10,000 as proposed by the Centre. For the use of handheld communication device while driving, the Centre proposed penalty of Rs 5,000, but Uttarakhand decided to cut it to Rs 1,000 for the first offence.

Cabinet minister Madan Kaushik said that the amended Act will be adopted and implemented with the changes decided in the Cabinet meeting.

For violation of standards of air pollution or noise pollution, the Centre has proposed penalty of Rs 10,000. But the state government has decided that penalty of Rs 2,500 will be charged for the first offence and Rs 5,000 for the second and subsequent offences.

The Centre proposed penalty of Rs 1,000 if a child inside the vehicle is not protected by Child Restraint System or safety belt. The state has decided to charge penalty of Rs 200 in such case.

The state government has decided to charge penalty of Rs 5,000 for not giving way to emergency vehicles like ambulance and fire brigade. The Centre had proposed penalty of Rs 10,000.

For driving an uninsured vehicle, the Centre had proposed penalty of Rs 2,000 for the first offence and Rs 4,000 for second and subsequent offences. The state government has reduced it to Rs 1,000 for two-wheelers and three-wheelers and Rs 2,000 for other vehicles in case of first offence. Penalty will be doubled in second and subsequent offences for these category vehicles.

KARNATAKA IMPLEMENTED, PENALTIES TO BE CUT

The amended Act came into force on September 3. However, the state government will approach the Centre for permission to reduce the penalties, Transport Minister Laxman Savadi said on Wednesday. The government will seek a report from Gujarat on the new penalties and efforts will be made to ensure that the new fines are not detrimental to the interests of common people, he said, after holding a discussion with Chief Minister B S

Police conducting checks on vehicles, in Noida on Wednesday. Gajendra Yadav

Yediyurappa on reducing fines on the lines of Gujarat.

GUJARAT PENALTIES CUT

The state government has slashed the penalty for 15 violations under the Act, thereby reducing the quantum of fine by 50% in most cases and by 70% in some, compared with the penalties decided by the Centre. "The government has no interest in harassing people by levying steep fines. Our priority is safety of human lives and we will ensure strict implementation of the new amendments, which have been reviewed by a high-level committee of experts and lawmakers," Chief Minister Vijay Rupani said.

MAHARASHTRA NOT IMPLEMENTED

The state government is yet to implement the penalties under the new Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Act. Last week, Transport Minister Diwakar Raote said that while his department has made an administrative decision, it is awaiting the opinion of the Law and Judiciary Department before announcing the modified fines.

ODISHA MORATORIUM FOR 3 MONTHS

The state on Monday relaxed implementation for three months after a spat between police and the public at several places in Bhubaneswar. "The CM directed the enforcement agencies not to go on an overdrive, but rather counsel and handhold the public. The Transport Department has been directed to augment public services, open extra counters, conduct camps in public institutions so as to enable motor vehicle users to update their compliance status. This process will continue over the next three months so that adequate time is made available to the public to ensure compliance," the statement said.

MADHYA PRADESH ON HOLD

The state has put on hold the implementation of the amended Act, saying the fine for violations is excessive. Law Minister P C Sharma said the state will study its implementation in other states, and that fines will be cut because states have the authority to do so.

CHHATTISGARH ON HOLD

Chhattisgarh, too, has decided to go with the old spot fines. "We are examining if the state government can make amendments," Home Minister Tamrandhwaj Sahu had said.

PUNJAB ON HOLD

Punjab has not implemented the amended rules. Transport Minister Razia Sultana said in a statement, "For the time being, provisions of the amended Act would not be applicable in the state and until any decision is taken on the implementation of the amended Motor Vehicles Act, old fines would be taken from traffic violators." She added, "Transport being a state subject, the Punjab government will exercise its discretion in implementing some of the provisions of the amended Motor Vehicles Act..."

HARYANA IMPLEMENTED

The state has implemented the new rules without slashing the penalty on traffic violations. However, in the poll-bound state, Chief Minister Manohar Lal Khattar said they would first launch an awareness campaign on the amended Act.

BIHAR IMPLEMENTED

The transport ministry has issued a notification asking all state and district authorities to ensure compliance with the amended Act, and passed an order on September 1 saying the fines prescribed by the Centre would be implemented in the state.

UTTAR PRADESH NO NOTIFICATION YET

The state government is yet to issue a notification to implement the amended Act. UP Traffic Police at present collects compounding fines for certain traffic violations, including driving two-wheelers without helmet and driving cars without seat belt, as per the notification issued on June 7, said Inspector General, Traffic Directorate (UP Police) Deepak Ratan. For some offences like drink-driving, fines are imposed by the court.

ASSAM WILL IMPLEMENT

Assam has decided to implement the new law by next week. "It will be implemented as it is, and we might add a few points. We will notify it by next week. We are awaiting an opinion from the Home Department on the level of officer who will fine the offender," said Assam minister and government spokesperson Chandra Mohan Patowary.

KERALA IMPLEMENTED, BUT NOW ON HOLD

Kerala had collected hiked fines for traffic violations for three days, but protests by the public and trade unions forced the state government to stop collecting the hiked fines. NCP leader and Kerala Transport Minister A K Saseendran said, "For the time being, we have decided not to collect the revised fines for traffic violations." He said Kerala would also factor in the decisions of the Gujarat government to reduce fines and of other states to put on hold the new rules.

WEST BENGAL ON HOLD

Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee said the state government will not implement the amended Act as it will burden the people. The state will continue with the existing West Bengal Motor Vehicles Rules, 1989. "We have given special focus to our traffic safety programme, and police and other stakeholders are working towards reducing accidents. If we implement it (new rules), it will come as an additional burden."

RAJASTHAN IMPLEMENTING PARTIALLY

Rajasthan has decided to implement the rules partially. On September 3, CM Ashok Gehlot announced that the compounding fee for 17 offences will initially be kept low "for practical reasons", so that people are "self-motivated". The fines for 16 serious offences will be kept high, as per the amendments.

TRIPURA TO BE IMPLEMENTED

Transport Minister Pranajit Singha Roy said: "These are good amendments. There is no negative aspect to it. We will implement it as it is." The state government has started an awareness drive.

ADMISSION TO MEDICAL COURSES

Bihar Health ministry seeks details of counselling for UG seats

SANTOSH SINGH
PATNA, SEPTEMBER 11

THE BIHAR Health Ministry on Wednesday sought phase-wise details of NEET-UG 2019 counselling from the Bihar Combined Entrance Competitive Examination Board (BCECEB) that just concluded the first, second and mop-up rounds, filling up 972 seats in government medical, dental and veterinary colleges.

The Indian Express on Wednesday published a report, "Bihar medical admission loophole: Low ranks mean top colleges", which showed how at least 125 students, who could have got MBBS seats if they were allowed to take part in mop-up round of counselling, ended up in BDS courses while low-rankers managed to get MBBS seats in the mop-up round.

In one case, a girl ranked 981 in Bihar, who could not have qualified for admission in the lowest-ranked Betiah Medical College, got a seat in the best-ranked Patna Medical College in the mop-up round. At least 100 BDS students, who could have got MBBS seats if allowed to take part in the mop-up round, are upset. Some of them are now exploring legal options.

Bihar principal secretary, Health, Sanjay Kumar told The Indian Express, "BCECEB had not given phase-wise list to me. I have asked the counselling board to give us phase-wise list with details of students, their social categories and who got which college in all three rounds." Kumar said it did look surprising how 183 seats remained vacant after two rounds of counselling. "Mop-up means left over seats, but 183 out of 972 is a big number."

Asked if the Health Ministry, being the monitoring agency, is also looking at how other states are allowing all students to take part in the mop-up round, the health secretary said, "Let us first see the phase-wise list. We will also see how other states are going about it. Low rankers getting into the best colleges does look irrational. We are surely looking at it."

All 183 seats, vacant after two rounds, were filled during the mop-up round. This meant lower-ranked students are now ahead of those who already sought admission after the second round and were not allowed to take part in the mop-up round.

PROCEEDS TO GO FOR CLEANING GANGA

More than 2,700 gifts to PM to be auctioned

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

DAGGERS, PAGRIS, paintings, shawls, and no less than a thousand portraits of Prime Minister Narendra Modi by various artists, which adorn the walls of National Gallery of Modern Art here, will be auctioned to raise funds for the Centre's Namami Gange project. All the 2,772 objects on display were presented to Modi during his official visits to various parts of the country in the last six months.

Union Culture Minister Prahalad Patel said on Wednesday that e-auction of these mementos will be held from September 14 to October 3. The base price of the objects ranges from Rs 200 to Rs 2.5 lakh — that of a portrait of Modi on silk and gifted to him by courtier and owner of Seematti textiles, Beena Kannan. Another portrait of the PM, done in the pichhwai style, has a base price of Rs 2 lakh. The auction will be held on an online portal designed by National Informatics Centre and will be open to all, said Patel.

"The items up for auction, which are being displayed at NGMA, will be changed every 15 days, and if need be the dates for the exhibition and auction will be extended," the minister said.

The base or reserved price of the items have been fixed by experts. NGMA Director-General Advaita Gadanayak said he has personally assessed all the artworks and fixed their prices accordingly, while for all other mementos, the price has been fixed by the Customs Department, he said.

"The exhibition pertains to gifts received by Modi during his visits within India, while those received from his visits abroad are handed to the Ministry of External Affairs, and it is up to them to give them for auction," added an official from the ministry.

In January, more than 1,800 gifts received by the PM were sold in a fortnight-long exercise, which saw participation of 4,000 bidders offline and online. The funds generated went towards the Namami Gange project.

An NGMA official said that the bids last time were many times their reserve price, but did not disclose the total amount raised. An official said a wooden replica of BMW was the most expensive memento to be sold at the e-auction, fetching Rs 5 lakh. About the items to be auctioned, Gadanayak said, "The objects pertain to all art forms of India — oil canvases, sculptures, textiles and embroidery, and digital prints. In terms of geography and traditions, they represent India in a nutshell." He added that there was a tie-up with India Post to deliver the objects to the successful bidders.

Patel said the ministry is likely to hold such auctions every six months, or as and when a sizeable number of objects are collected.

Monsoon this year to be normal, withdrawal likely after Sept 15: IMD

ANJALI MARAR
PUNE, SEPTEMBER 11

THE MONSOON season for the country will end on a positive note and be normal, with the withdrawal most likely to occur between September 15 and September 20.

According to officials of India Meteorological Department (IMD), the rainfall during the on-going month will be normal like August and July months, taking the season's total rainfall to normal.

"This month too, we are expecting to record above normal rainfall over the country. The monsoon this year will end up being normal," said D Sivanand Pai, head, Climate Research and Services (CRS) at IMD, Pune.

As far as September rainfall is concerned, all regions except north-east and north-west have recorded normal rainfall till September 11.

The rainfall departures in each of the homogenous regions on the day were Central India (+21.2 per cent), South Peninsula (+9.7 per cent), East and North East (-19.5 per cent) and North West (-8.5 per cent). As on Wednesday, the All India rainfall stood 2.8 per cent above normal.

The weakening of El Nino during early July and the consistent shifting of the monsoon trough between south and central India regions hugely benefited the overall rainfall this season. The rainfall distribution was fairly spatially even over most parts. In fact, this season saw many events of flooding in states like Bihar, Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Punjab, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Rajasthan, Gujarat, Maharashtra, Karnataka and Kerala.

However, the northeast region will end up remaining rainfall deficit, with meteorologists stating that most rain bearing systems formed in the Bay of Bengal traversed along Central India further either to the north or west.

As a result, the east and northeast regions that are otherwise wet areas during these four months were deprived of even normal rain in many areas.

Placing idols in mosque illegal usurpation: Sunni board to SC

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE SUNNI Wakf Board on Wednesday told the Supreme Court that the alleged placing of idols of Hindu deities in the Babri Masjid in December 1949 was an "illegal usurpation" and sought to know whether it can create any right in favour of Hindus.

"December 22 (1949) was an illegal usurpation and using that December 22 to January 5, 1950 (when Babri Masjid was attached by the city magistrate), can your Lordships say it creates a right," senior advocate Rajeev Dhavan, appearing for the Board and one of the appellants, M Siddiq, told a five-judge Constitution Bench headed by Chief Justice of India Ranjan Gogoi.

The bench, also comprising Justices S A Bobde, D Y Chandrachud, Ashok Bhushan and S A Nazeer, is hearing appeals against the September 30, 2010 verdict of the Allahabad High Court for a three-way division of the disputed 2.77-acre site.

Dhavan, who had accepted that idols of Hindu deities were being worshiped in Ram Chabutara on the outer courtyard of the disputed site and that the Nirmohi Akhara had shebait rights, said this did not give them any ownership rights.

The Akhara, which was granted one-third of the disputed land by the Allahabad HC, has said that the birthplace of Ram, "now commonly known as 'Janmabhoomi', belongs and has always belonged" to it.

The term 'belonging to', as per the Akhara, extended limitation period to file lawsuit, Dhavan told the bench. "The answer is that it (land) does not belong to them and 'Akhara' is not the owner of the property either under the English law on trusteeship or as a

'shebait'," he submitted.

A shebait under Hindu law is entrusted with the task of maintaining and preserving an idol and its property.

The hearing, which started only after lunch, saw Dhavan trying to explain the concepts of continuing wrong and possession under civil law.

The arguments remained inconclusive and will resume on Thursday.

SC to hear plea for live streaming on Sept 16

The court also said that on September 16 it will take up a plea by social activist K N Govindacharya seeking live-streaming or recording of the on-going hearing in the case.

Govindacharya, in his plea filed through lawyer Virag Gupta, has urged the court to at least make provision for audio-recording of the proceedings if live-streaming it is not possible. The plea stated, "The common public, which is devotee of Lord Ram, is interested in knowing how an individual can represent Lord

Ram before the Supreme Court.... There are crores of persons, including the petitioner, who want to witness the proceedings in the matter but cannot do the same due to the present norms in Supreme Court. There are also others who wish to intervene and attend the proceedings but cannot do the same due to orders of this Court in the matter."

Govindacharya recalled that the Supreme Court had in its September 2018 judgment in the Centre for Accountability and Systemic Change vs Secretary General case ruled in favour of live-streaming in important constitutional matters. But that is yet to be implemented, he stated.

The Supreme Court, he pointed out, had said in the judgment that "sunlight is the best disinfectant. Live-streaming as an extension of the principle of open courts will ensure that the interface between a court hearing with virtual reality will result in the dissemination of information in the widest possible sense, imparting transparency and accountability to the judicial process."

Rally against 'injustice to Vokkaligas' in Bengaluru

BENGALURU, SEPTEMBER 11

THE INCARCERATION since September 3 of senior Congress leader D K Shivakumar in a money-laundering case by the ED assumed caste contours on Wednesday with the dominant Vokkaliga community, to which the former minister belongs, taking out a large rally and protesting against alleged injustice to community members.

More than 20,000 people from the Vokkaliga community, including prominent leaders from the Congress and JDS, participated in the rally held under heavy security in Bengaluru to protest alleged selective targeting of community members like Shivakumar, Cafe Coffee Day founder V G Siddhartha and former JDS chief minister H D Kumaraswamy by the ruling BJP using investigative agencies.

The rally, under the banner of World Vokkaliga Maha Vedike, brought traffic in a major part of Bengaluru to a halt even as community leaders warned of adverse reaction if community members are targeted unjustly.

"Nearly 25,000 participated in the protest rally conducted by Vokkaliga groups, there were no untoward incidents," the Bengaluru police commissioner said.

After the protest, L R

Shivaram Gowda, a former JDS MP; M V Rajeev Gowda, a Congress MP; Narayana Gowda of the pro-Kannada group Karnataka Rakshana Vedike; JDS MLC Narayanaswamy and Congress member H S Manjunath met Governor Vajubhai Vala and presented a memorandum opposing the targeting of community members by agencies.

"In the present political situation in the state and the country, people's representatives, political leaders and entrepreneurs from the Vokkaliga community are being targeted by the government using its agencies like the I-T department, ED and CBI for political vendetta and this goes against the democratic setup of the country," president of World Vokkaliga Maha Vedike Y D Ravishankar said.

Earlier, prominent Congress leaders including state president Dinesh Gundu Rao participated in the Vokkaliga community solidarity meeting in Bengaluru. Rao also accused the BJP government at the Centre of using the I-T department and ED to selectively target political leaders.

The Vokkaligas in southern Karnataka are arch political rivals of the Lingayats of north Karnataka — another dominant community — who are primarily allied with the BJP, with community leader B Yediurappa being CM at present.

Though prominent JDS

Vokkaliga leaders like former prime minister H D Deve Gowda and former CM H D Kumaraswamy were not present at the rally, there were indications of broad-based support from the JDS for the Vokkaliga rally.

"My party workers participated in the protest. I had a pre-scheduled engagement, otherwise I would have participated in the protests," Kumaraswamy said in his Channarayana constituency.

"Investigating agencies of the Centre or state should not be a puppet of the government. Shivakumar is being arrested and his family is tormented out of political vengeance," JDS spokesperson Ramesh Babu said while voicing support for the rally.

BJP ministers from the Vokkaliga community opposed the protests. "The ED arrested Shivakumar to probe a case of money-laundering. Congress giving the arrest a caste colour is high drama. BJP and Centre have no role in this. Investigating agencies are doing their job," Vokkaliga community leader and BJP Revenue Minister R Ashoka said.

"The corrupt must be brought to the streets and no one should come to the streets in support of the corrupt," BJP Tourism Minister and Vokkaliga community member C T Ravi said. "It looks like somebody wants to take undue advantage," Union minister D V Sadananda Gowda said.

FIR by BJP leader accuses participants of trying to incite communal hatred

SREENIVAS JANYALA
HYDERABAD, SEPTEMBER 11

SEVERAL PEOPLE have been booked in Kavali town of Andhra Pradesh's Nellore district on a complaint of alleged attempt to disturb public peace and inciting feelings of hatred after they held a meeting to discuss the Centre's move to scrap special status to Jammu and Kashmir under Article 370 and the situation in the Valley in its aftermath.

The organisers denied there was any attempt to disturb peace and accused BJP leaders of filing police complaints to "stifle opposing voices".

The FIR names V S Krishna, coordination committee member of Human Rights Forum, Andhra Pradesh; K Bhaskar, president of Progressive Democratic Students Union; Mohammed Afzal, a religious leader; and others for organising the meeting on September 8.

BJP president of Kavali town Bellamkonda Malyadri lodged the police complaint on Tuesday.

The organisers were booked under IPC Sections 504 (intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of peace), 505 (intent to incite any class or community of persons to commit any offence against any other class or community), 153(A) (promoting or attempts to promote disharmony or feelings of enmity on grounds of religion, race, place of birth, residence, language, caste, community, etc) read with 34 (acts by several people in furtherance of common intention).

An official at Kavali Police Station said, "We received a complaint stating that the speakers said things which incite feelings of hatred between communities. We have procured videos of the speeches and will investigate the matter."

Last week, the police had declined permission to Human Rights Forum to hold a meeting on Article 370 in Adoni and Kurnool, in Kurnool district, stating that it may disturb peace.

V S Krishna of the rights outfit said, "This was our ninth meeting in AP. We just discuss abrogation of (special status to J&K under) Article 370 and its effects on Kashmiri people. We don't disturb peace or create a law and order situation."

Accusing the Narendra Modi government of committing a "Constitutional outrage" in J&K, he said, "The communications blockade has further alienated Kashmiris. Any discussion on Kashmir unfortunately never involves Kashmiris...it (Kashmir) is just referred to as if it is a piece of real estate."

He said, "Every day the Centre says things are normal in Kashmir. So why is there still a lockdown? If it is being done for the good of Kashmiris why is their voice not heard anywhere? Why is the opinion of Kashmiris suppressed by this lockdown? In a democracy all these things need to be discussed. We cannot just go by the narrative of the government that everything is fine when no one is allowed to go there to find out what is happening."

He also said, "BJP leaders all over are opposed to any discussion on Article 370 and are still filing opposing voice by filing these police complaints."

Nitish is captain of NDA in Bihar, says Sushil Modi

SANTOSH SINGH
PATNA, SEPTEMBER 11

AMID THE sparring between some JD(U) and BJP leaders over continuance of Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar's leadership, and the Opposition BJP's posers to the BJP on the issue, Deputy CM and senior BJP leader Sushil Kumar Modi has backed "captain" Nitish.

"Nitish is the captain of the NDA in Bihar and will remain its Captain in the 2020 Assembly elections. When the captain is hitting fours and sixes and defeating rivals by innings, where is the question of any change?" Sushil Modi said on Wednesday.

His remarks came two days after BJP MLC and former Union minister Sanjay Paswan advised Nitish to "move to the Centre and leave Bihar to the BJP and second-rung JD(U) leadership". Paswan also expressed displeasure at the JD(U) not supporting the BJP on the NRC.

Senior BJP leader and former Union minister C P Thakur had supported Paswan, saying that "now the BJP should be given a chance to rule the NDA coalition".

Sushil Modi's defence of Nitish's leadership — the second time in two months — comes even as the war of words between leaders of the alliance partners has begun to intensify. Sources said the state BJP had always been divided, with one camp supporting Nitish's leadership for 2020 and another for the BJP leading the NDA.

Damage control amid political posturing

AS THE seniormost BJP leader and Deputy CM of Bihar, Sushil Kumar Modi has been trying to do damage control by defending Nitish Kumar. Sushil Modi has always stood for him, even inviting the ire of the BJP top leadership by calling Nitish "PM material" in 2012. Ahead of Assembly elections, it is now time for early posturing by both alliance partners. While the BJP feels it is time to assert itself, after the NDA won 39 of 40 Lok Sabha seats in Bihar, the JD(U) is banking on Nitish.

leader if he quits the NDA, said: "If some senior BJP leaders have started questioning Nitish's leadership, one can guess where it is coming from. The BJP-JD(U) relationship could be further strained as the BJP has now started to prevail over Nitish, who had to play second fiddle to PM Narendra Modi in the Lok Sabha polls."

CBI arrests Talwar aide in fund misuse case

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE CBI on Wednesday arrested a close aide of corporate lobbyist Deepak Talwar in connection with a case of alleged misuse of funds by his NGO Advantage India.

Talwar is also facing a probe by the CBI and Enforcement Directorate for allegedly influencing dubious deals between Air India and foreign aircraft manufacturers leading to massive losses to the exchequer.

The agency has arrested Yasmin Kapoor who allegedly handled day-to-day operations of companies linked to Talwar, sources said. The CBI suspects that Kapoor played an active role in diverting funds received by Advantage India. Sources said Kapoor will be produced in a special CBI court on Thursday.

The case relates to allegations of misutilisation of foreign contribution, which were received under the CSR scheme for carrying out educational and social activities in India.

"The funds were allegedly received mainly from a foreign-based company to the tune of Rs 90.72 crore in the bank accounts of a Delhi-based private firm/NGO registered under the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act, 2010 for carrying out social welfare activities in the field of education," a CBI spokesperson had said after registration of FIR in November 2017.

Cong on Nirmala: Ola-Uber remark shows immaturity

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE CONGRESS on Wednesday took on Union Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman for her remarks that young people's propensity to prefer radio taxis over buying cars is among the reasons that has contributed to the slowdown in the automobile sector, saying that she blames everyone except the ruling BJP for the handling of the economy.

Senior Congress leader Abhishek Singhvi said: "This remarkable, unbelievable statement by the Finance Minister of India reflects the inefficiency, immaturity and inexperience — the three I's, as Shri (Prime Minister Narendra) Modi would say of the BJP in governance. The gross overstatement made by the Finance Minister is a grave joke on the economy, on the country. Why? Because the dip in GDP is the real new normal for this government."

He said the "logic of the Finance Minister on economic slowdown, if applied to 10 questions in 10 sectors, 10 issues, will make it comical, though of course it is tragic for the nation."

Sitharaman had on Tuesday said: "The automobile and components industry has been affected by BS-VI (Bharat Stage VI) [norms] and the mindsets of millennial, who now prefer to have Ola and Uber rather than committing to buying an automobile."

alleging that his wife, who was Hindu before marriage, was illegally detained by her parents.

In that case, Dwivedi said, a three-judge bench of the top court had upheld the right of a person to choose a partner of his or her choice.

To this, the court said, "...We are not averse to even living-together relations but we have to be concerned about her.... We have a duty to protect her."

As senior advocate Gopal Sankaranarayanan, representing the woman, said there is "no need to portray women as vulnerable and in need of protection from someone", the court did not relent and said it was only trying to secure her future in view of contradictions highlighted by the petitioner.

Justice Mishra said, "We are not against interfaith or inter-caste marriages.... But what if the husband leaves the girl after some time? We just want to know his bona fides. We have a duty. (The) rest is her destiny."

Turning to Dwivedi, Justice Mishra remarked, "Be a loyal husband."

Justice Shah added, "Not just a great husband — be a great lover and a loyal husband."

Nirmala Sitharaman and Abhishek Singhvi

Singhvi on Wednesday asked whether, in similar vein, landlords and the millennial generation, who by similar logic would rent homes than buying them, are responsible for the downturn in the real estate sector, and whether the money "overspent by spendthrift overspending homemakers leading to an imbalance in the economy's balancesheet".

Singhvi said the slowdown in GDP growth is "not our fault, is not the Finance Ministry's fault, not the Prime Minister's, government's fault...it is because researchers who keep recalculating these figures, whether in the Budget or in the Economic Survey, keep changing methodologies and keep confusing us".

The Congress party took a jibe at the government in on Twitter, stating, "Despite their promise of protecting wealth creators, the government's disastrous policies have wiped away Rs 12.5 lakh crore of investor wealth in the last 100 days. Unlike the FM's excuses, these are the real reasons for it: Demonetisation, GST, Tax Terrorism."

OTP is a randomly generated number and sent to registered cell-phone numbers and email addresses for validation of transactions online.

A bench headed by Chief Justice D N Patel observed that the petitioner, advocate Amit Sahni, did not show anything to the effect that OTP is mandatory for online purchases made in India. "It appears that OTP is not always required within India. It all depends on the facts and circumstances of the case," the bench said.

Accused in 1988 Sati glorification case surrenders, granted bail

JAIPUR, SEPTEMBER 11

AN ACCUSED in the Roop Kanwar Sati glorification case surrendered in Jaipur district court Wednesday and was granted bail, officials said. Laxman Singh, who was reportedly absconding since March this year, surrendered at a special court for Sati cases here. Five other accused are still absconding. The matter pertains to September 22, 1988, when police at Sikar arrested 45 people for allegedly glorifying Roop Kanwar.

A year before that, Roop Kanwar sat on her husband Maal Singh's funeral pyre on September 4, 1987, and committed Sati. As many as 32 people were named accused for her death and for allegedly encouraging her to commit 'Sati'. They were acquitted in 1996. In 1988, 45 people allegedly indulged in glorification of her act and a separate case was lodged. They had allegedly violated Section 5 (punishment for glorification of Sati) of The Commission of Sati (Prevention) Act, 1987. The maximum punishment in such cases is imprisonment up to seven years and fine up to Rs 30,000.

Of the 45, 25 were acquitted in 2004 for lack of evidence, six have died, and five are absconding. The case is being heard against eight people — this becomes nine after the latest surrender.

At the last hearing, Special Public Prosecutor Narpat Singh filed an application under CrPc 311 to examine additional evidence. Advocate Surendra Singh Naruka, representing the eight accused, filed a reply Wednesday. "Our basis of argument is that the prosecution had failed to prove the involvement of 25 persons — who were initially acquitted — and we had accepted that too. So, the eight accused are in a similar situation; what new evidence has cropped up that the prosecution filed an application under CrPc 311," he asked.

Suspected of being child-lifter, man lynched in Asansol

KOLKATA, SEPTEMBER 11

A MAN was lynched at Asansol subdivision of West Bengal early on Wednesday morning after local residents suspected him to be a child-lifter. In a separate incident, a mentally-challenged man was beaten up by residents at Dinhat in Cooch Behar district, also on the suspicion that he is a child-lifter.

According to police, rumours of child-lifters on the prowl had been doing the rounds in Salanpur village in Asansol subdivision of West Burdwan district. Around 6 am on Tuesday, local residents saw a man loitering in the area, suspected him of being a child-lifter and assaulted him, said police. When a police team reached, the residents heckled them, said police.

"The man was rushed to a hospital where he was declared

UNNAO CASE

In-camera proceedings to record victim's statement begin at AIIMS

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

IN-CAMERA PROCEEDINGS commenced on Wednesday at AIIMS here, where a temporary court has been set up for recording the Unnao rape victim's statement in the case of alleged sexual assault by Kuldeep Singh Sengar, an MLA who has now been expelled by BJP.

The woman's statement is being recorded by District Judge Dharmesh Sharma.

In-camera proceedings are not open to the public and the press.

Sengar, along with co-accused Shashi Singh, was brought to the temporary court at Jai Prakash Narayan Apex Trauma Centre, AIIMS, where the woman is admitted following an accident on July 28.

The Delhi High Court had on Friday approved recording the rape victim's statement at the AIIMS Trauma Centre. A notification to this effect was issued by the brought dead. We have got video footage of the incident and are trying to identify the culprits," said D P Singh, Police Commissioner of Asansol-Durgapur. Police said the youth is yet to be identified.

In Cooch Behar, residents of Boro Atiabari village beat up a 32-year-old mentally-challenged man who was seen roaming near a shop around 8 pm on Tuesday, said police. The mob suspected him to be a child-lifter, tied up his hands and legs, and beat him up, said police. A police team managed to rescue him and admit him to Dinhata subdivisional hospital. "We are investigating the matter. We are also continuing our efforts to spread awareness against rumours in the locality," said an officer of Dinhata police station.

The fresh incidents of mob violence come on the heels of the West Bengal Assembly passing the Prevention of Lynching Bill on August 30. The new legislation has a provision of death penalty high court from the administrative side, which said special judge Sharma, who is conducting trial of the cases, shall record her testimony. The rape victim was airlifted from a Lucknow hospital to Delhi on Supreme Court's orders.

The high court notification came after the apex court asked it to expeditiously decide on the request of a special judge for setting up a temporary court at AIIMS to record the victim's statement.

The special judge had recently written to for those convicted.

West Bengal has seen a string of similar incidents triggered by rumours this month.

On September 3, one Dharma Singh (25) was beaten up by residents of Baniapara village in Jalpaiguri district on the suspicion that he is a child-lifter. The mob also vandalised a police vehicle when policemen went to rescue him. A day later, Khabir Sheikh, a 32-year-old mason, died after being assaulted by a mob inside a clinic at Lalbagh in Murshidabad district.

On September 7, at Kharkharia village, Dinhat, a mentally challenged person was beaten up by local residents. He was later identified as Joseph Santhal.

The next day, another man was beaten up in Hirapur area of West Burdwan district. The police managed to rescue him, but the mob attacked the three civic police volunteers who went to rescue him.

Chidambaram moves HC for bail in INX case

PRITAM PAL SINGH
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

FORMER UNION minister P Chidambaram on Wednesday moved the Delhi High Court seeking regular bail in the INX Media case, alleging that the present criminal proceedings is "borne out of political vendetta" and that the investigating agency is acting at the behest of the Union government.

The senior Congress leader, by way of a separate petition, also sought a stay on the operation of the trial court's order of September 5 remanding him in 14 days' judicial custody in the case till September 19.

Both pleas will be heard on Thursday by Justice Suresh Kumar Kait.

Probing charges of corruption in the case, the CBI had arrested Chidambaram (73) on August 21 night amid high drama. He remained in CBI custody for 15 days and was then sent to Tihar jail until September 19, following which the Special Court issued directions to keep him in a separate cell in Tihar as he was a protectee under Z-security.

Chidambaram moved the plea directly in the High Court through his advocates Arshdeep Singh and Akshat Gupta, saying he is a "law-abiding citizen having deep roots in the society", "not a flight risk", and is "willing to abide by all such conditions as may be imposed" by the court while granting him bail.

The plea claimed that the "petitioner (Chidambaram) has filed the instant bail application directly" before the High Court since the Special Judge has "pre-determined" the issue by declining his prayer for release on September 5 and remanded him in judicial custody despite there being no ground for the same.

Challenging the remand order, the plea said that "…none of the officials of FIPB have been arrested or even sought to be arrested by the CBI in the subject FIR. It is the petitioner's case that the instant criminal proceeding is mala fide and is borne out of political

CHIDAMBARAM GETS FAMILY TO TWEET, EXPRESSES CONCERN OVER ECONOMY

New Delhi: Congress leader P Chidambaram on Wednesday expressed concern over the state of economy and questioned the government on its plan to get the country out of this "decline and gloom".

Chidambaram, who was sent to judicial custody in Tihar Jail last week, asked his family members to post a message from him on Twitter.

"I am deeply concerned about the economy. The poor are the worst affected. Lower, fewer jobs, less trade and lower investment affect the poor and the middle class. Where is the plan to get the country out of this decline and gloom," he asked. PTI vendetta, and that the investigating agency is acting at the behest of the Central Government, which wants to malign the untainted and unimpeachable reputation of the Petitioner's, who is a senior leader of the Indian National Congress Party and is also the ex-Union Finance Minister".

"It is settled law that if police custody remand is not extended, then judicial custody remand is not an automatic consequence and it is obligatory for the Ld. Judge to apply his judicial mind and not to pass an order of remand automatically or in a mechanical manner," the plea said.

It said there is not a single allegation that any loss has been caused to the public exchequer or any wrongful gain made by any private entity due to grant of FIPB approval in case of INX Media. "In fact the said approval has ensured Foreign Direct Investment of 305 crores in the country," the plea said.

The INX Media case pertains to alleged irregularities in FIPB clearance granted when Chidambaram was Union finance minister.

Nath nephew's ED remand extended by five days

New Delhi: A Delhi court has extended by five days the ED remand of Ratul Puri, nephew of Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Kamal Nath, in connection with a money-laundering case related to the AgustaWestland matter.

Special Judge Arvind Kumar issued the order after listening to counsel of the ED and Puri, and said he deemed it fit to grant five days' remand looking at the facts and circumstances.

ED counsel D P Singh and N K Matta submitted that the house of Niamat Bakshi, a trusted friend of Puri, was searched by ED on September 7, and that he is responsible for manipulating, disposing of and destruction of evidence. The ED submitted that they recovered print-outs running into hundreds of pages pertaining to Puri's email, apart from handwritten notes and diaries linked to the case.

"We have summoned 20 people out of which 10 have been interrogated. We have also recovered 2.5 TB data from searches conducted at Hindustan Power Projects Pvt Ltd. We need to confront the accused with the same," ED counsel Singh told the court. The ED also submitted that they are still looking for K K Khosla, a witness in AgustaWestland money-laundering case, who they claimed may have been killed.

Puri's counsel Vijay Aggarwal submitted that if ED knew about the company, why did they not search the office earlier. "The ED is making a new story every time they want to extend his custody. The agency should have confronted the so-called other accused in the previous remand itself," ENS

Police: Car in RSS chief's convoy hits bike, 6-yr-old dies

JAIPUR, SEPTEMBER 11

ASIX-YEAR-OLD boy died and his grandfather, aged 66, was grievously injured after a vehicle that was allegedly part of RSS chief Mohan Bhagwat's cavalcade hit the latter's motorcycle in Alwar district on Wednesday.

"My brother Chetram Yadav, 66, was returning home from a clinic on a motorbike around noon with his six-year-old grandson, Sachin, when he was hit by a car in Bhagwat's convoy," Kartar Singh, 49, told The Indian Express.

Chetram, sarpanch of Sheopur village in Mundawar tehsil of the district, had taken Sachin to the clinic after the boy complained of stomach ache, Singh said.

Sachin died on the spot; Chetram was referred to a hospital in Jaipur.

In a statement, the RSS stated that Bhagwat stopped his convoy as soon as he learnt about the accident and resumed his journey to Behror only after sending the

Maoists attack former cadre in Gadchiroli, 1 killed

VIVEK DESHPANDE
NAGPUR, SEPTEMBER 11

A FORMER Maoist, who had surrendered and was working for police, was killed and another injured in an attack by the left-wing extremists near Gilanguda village in Etapalli tehsil of Gadchiroli on Tuesday, police said.

A press release issued by Gadchiroli police said, Ashok, 30, was a member of Bhamragad Dalam before he surrendered in 2010, while Kishor, 32, was a member of company 4 and 10 of CPI(Maoist). Both had surrendered in 2013.

The two, who were residing at Gadchiroli since surrender, were visiting their villages, Zarewada and Nainwadi, respectively, on Monday. "On Tuesday, both started from Zarewada on motorbike to return to Gadchiroli. Near Gilanguda, they were accosted by some Maoists, who opened fire at them," the press note said. Madhukar died in the attack.

KERALA DEMOLITION

Residents move SC with curative plea

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

RESIDENTS OF one of the apartment complexes in Maradu municipality of Kerala's Ernakulam district, which are facing demolition for violation of Coastal Regulation Zone (CRZ) norms, approached the Supreme Court with a curative petition on Wednesday.

The petitioners, residents of Golden Kayaloram apartments, also filed an application urging the court to hear the curative petition in open court.

The move comes less than a week ahead of the deadline set by the apex court for demolition of the flats. On September 6, a bench of Justices Arun Mishra and M R Shah declined to give the state any more time to carry out the demolition. The bench directed that the demolition exercise be completed and a compliance report be filed by September 20.

A bench of Justices Mishra and Navin Sinha had on May 8 ordered demolition of five apartment complexes comprising over 300 flats for flouting CRZ guidelines. The court directed that the structures be demolished in a month.

Subsequently, the Kerala State Coastal Zone Management Authority approached the court, which was on summer vacation, with an application for extension of time to carry out the demolition. The plea came up before a vacation bench of Justices Arun Mishra and M R Shah which rejected it on May 21.

Later, groups of flat owners approached the court with fresh petitions, saying they had not been heard by a committee which drew up the report on the alleged violations. Hearing these on June 10, another vacation bench of Justices Indira Banerjee and Ajay Rastogi said judicial propriety demands that the petitions be heard by the same bench which ordered the demolition. However, the bench also ordered a stay on the demolitions until further orders.

When it again came up for hearing on July 5, the bench of Justices Mishra and Shah was critical of the other bench for passing the stay order.

PECUNIARY INTERESTS OF 213 MPs

Type of pecuniary interest	MPs who have declared interests
Remunerative directorship	24 (11.3%)
Regular remunerated activity	30 (14.1%)
Shareholding of controlling nature	44 (20.7%)
Paid consultancy	2 (0.9%)
Professional engagement	40 (18.8%)

A REPORT by the Association for Democratic Reforms (ADR) and New Election Watch has analysed the pecuniary interests declared by 213 sitting members of Rajya Sabha. Seventeen Rajya Sabha MPs have not submitted their declarations.

Among the 213 MPs who did submit declarations, 124 (58%) declared NA or “nil” for interests under the five heads under which MPs are required to make declarations. These are remunerative directorship; regular remunerative activity; shareholding of a controlling nature; paid consultancy; and professional engagement.

Remunerative directorship: 24 MPs declared that they have some financial interest in this form. The highest amount received for remunerative directorship was declared by D Kupendra Reddy of JD(S) in Karnataka, at Rs 40.68 crore per year, followed by Rajeev Chandrasekhar (BJP, Karnataka) at Rs 7.03 crore and Abdul Wahab (IUML, Kerala) at Rs 3.34 crore. The maximum number of directorships was declared by Gokulakrishnan (AIADMK, Puducherry) who holds seven of these.

Regular remunerated activity: 30 (14.1%) MPs declared that they have a financial interest in this form. The highest amount received from regular remunerated activity was declared by Mahesh Poddar (BJP, Jharkhand) at Rs 3.18 crore per annum, followed by Mary Kom (BJP, nominated) at Rs2.50 crore per annum, and Swapan Dasgupta (nominated) at Rs 66.60 lakh per year.

Shareholding of controlling nature: Forty-four (20.7%) MPs declared such interests. The highest amount was declared by Ravindra Kishore Sinha (BJP, Bihar) at Rs 747 crore, followed by Abhishek Manu Singhvi (Congress, West Bengal) at Rs 386 crore and Kakde Sanjay Dattatraya (Independent, Maharashtra) at Rs 262 crore.

Paid consultancy: Only two MPs declared they have financial interests in the form of paid consultancy. K T S

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

CHIEF MINISTER Arvind Kejriwal said last week that pollution levels in Delhi, primarily the concentration of particulate matter, has reduced by 25% over a period of four years.

Five years ago, in 2014, a global study on air quality trends by the World Health Organisation had declared Delhi the most polluted city in the world. Since then, the Centre, states and courts have taken several steps to arrest pollution in the city.

What the data show

Delhi, through its pollution control committee, started monitoring air quality in real time only in 2010. It started out with four stations — in R K Puram, Punjabi Bagh, Anand Vihar, and Mandir Marg. The number of stations was increased to 26 last year.

It was in 2012 that Delhi saw its worst air quality, a senior official of the Delhi Pollution Control Committee (DPCC) said. “We felt the full force of crop-residue burning that year, especially in October and November. It was the first time that this burning was seriously flagged. We realised this was a big reason for the sudden dip in air quality in Delhi,” he said.

But since 2012, the average annual concentration of particulate matter — the primary cause of pollution in the city — has been falling. Gradual in the beginning, the dip has been sharper between 2015 and 2018. (See chart)

Particulate matter, according to the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), is a mixture of solid particles and liquid droplets in air. Some particles can be seen with the naked eye; others can only be detected under a microscope. In Delhi’s air, the primary pollutants are PM2.5 (inhalable particles of diameter 2.5 micrometres and smaller) and PM10 (10 micrometres and smaller).

DPCC data from 2012 to 2019 show 2018 saw the lowest average concentration of PM2.5. In 2012, the annual average was 160 micrograms per cubic metre; it came down 20% to 128 micrograms/cubic m in 2018. Despite a tough first three months, owing primarily to adverse weather, air quality improved consistently for the rest of the year.

The most polluted months of the year are November, December and January, with pollution peaking in November, monthly averages between 2012 and 2018 show.

It is in November that the highest volume of crop residue is burnt in Haryana, Punjab and UP. It is also when temperatures fall and humidity rises, aiding the increase in concentration of pollutants in the air. Locally, the burning of leaves picks up in November.

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

PRIME MINISTER Narendra Modi Wednesday launched the National Animal Disease Control Programme (NADCP), aimed at eradicating foot and mouth disease (FMD) and brucellosis in livestock.

India has the world’s largest livestock population of 125-crore plus heads, but cattle productivity is low, and animal diseases are a major concern. The diseases have resulted in some overseas markets being shut to Indian dairy and meat products, and prevented the industry from realising its income potential.

However, as the chart shows, PM2.5 concentrations have fallen over the years — in November as well as in the ‘cleaner’ months of July, August and September.

PM10

Between 2012 and 2018, the concentration of PM10 reduced by 21% from an average 351 micrograms/cubic m to 277 micrograms/cubic m. PM10 is more prominent in the air in winter, primarily because of open burning and road and construction dust.

Until August this year, Delhi’s performance in terms of PM10 concentration has been encouraging. In August, the average concentration fell to double digits for the first time since 2012; in 2013, this figure was as high as 288 micrograms/cubic m.

Seasonal variation, weather

Over the past five years, several studies have pointed to the fact that weather and seasons are among the biggest determinants of Delhi’s air quality.

“No matter how much we try, air quality in

THIS WORD MEANS: NADCP, FMD, BRUCELLOSIS

In Central programme, focus on animal health

lease, the programme aims to vaccinate over 500 million livestock heads, including cattle, buffalo, sheep, goats and pigs, against FMD, and some 36 million female bovine calves annually against brucellosis. The programme has received 100% funding from the Centre, amounting to Rs 12,652 crore for five years until 2024, the release said. The NADCP aims to control these two diseases by 2025, and to eradicate them by 2030.

FMD: It is a highly infectious viral disease of cattle, swine, sheep, goats, and other cloven-hooved ruminants. FMD is generally not fatal in adult animals but leaves them severely weakened, and results in a drastically reduced production of milk and can, therefore, be financially ruinous for dairy farmers. Infected animals get a fever, sores in their mouth, on their teats, and between their hooves. FMD spreads through excretions and secretions; infected animals also exhale the virus.

According to the World Organisation for Animal Health, the intergovernmental organisation responsible for improving animal health worldwide, FMD is endemic in several parts of Asia, most of Africa, and the Middle East. Australia, New Zealand, Indonesia, Central and North America, continental Western Europe, and most Latin American countries are FMD-free.

Measures to stop outbreaks and check FMD transmission include controlled introduction of new animals into existing herds, regular cleaning and disinfection of livestock areas, monitoring and reporting of illness, and use of effective vaccination strategies.

Brucellosis: This is a zoonotic disease that, according to the Department of Animal Husbandry and Dairying, is endemic in most parts of the country. Brucellosis causes early abortions in animals, and prevents the addition of new calves to the animal population.

The control the disease, the World Health Organisation recommends the vaccination of cattle and, in some cases, testing and culling. The government told Parliament in July that the Brucellosis Control Programme component of the NADCP envisages 100% vaccination coverage of female cattle and buffalo calves (4-8 months of age) once in their lifetimes.

Why Apple launches new iPhones every year, packed in a cycle of hype

NANDAGOPAL RAJAN

CUPERTINO, SEPTEMBER 11

AT APPLE Park Campus here in California, at the world’s most hyped annual tech media event, Apple on Tuesday announced three new iPhones, a new Apple Watch and a new iPad. There were no big surprises — even though the slightly lower pricing of the iPhone 11 base model, and the aggressive monthly subscription rates of new services Arcade and Apple TV+ got some applause.

Why does Apple launch new phones every year in September?

Apple is different from other smartphone makers — it has, at least in countries like the United States and Australia, a captive base of users who don’t actually put a lot of money down to buy a new iPhone; rather, they pay for it as part of their monthly telephone bill. It is almost like a subscription service — every time they get a new iPhone, their monthly bill goes up by a few dollars. These users — whose numbers are substantial — end up periodically upgrading to newer devices, thus assuring Apple a certain sales volume every quarter.

But to persuade these users to upgrade, Apple must come up with new phones every year, catering to all sorts of budgets and users. So, this year, the iPhone 11 is the budget phone, while the iPhone 11 Pro and iPhone 11 Pro Max are the premium ones.

But what explains the huge hype before Apple events?

The iPhone is the original smartphone — Steve Jobs pretty much created this segment when he announced the first iPhone in 2007. Apple has been setting smartphone trends ever since. Over the years, the entire mobile phone industry, and even users, have come to look at the Apple event expecting new features to be introduced.

However, over the past few years, rivals have beaten Apple to at least some cutting-edge features. The ultra wide lens that the new iPhone has got for example, is something that Samsung, OnePlus and some others have had for at least a year. But most of these brands are also trying to preempt what Apple will launch — and often don’t provide the same experience as Apple in terms of syncing the hardware and software.

The hype cycle usually helps Apple trigger a fear of “missing out”, at least among its loyal user base — and to get a lot of upgrades going, even if they are not actually based on user needs.

So is every new phone really better than the earlier one?

Yes, they are. What is tougher to say, for Apple as for all smartphones though, is exactly how much better. Technology and innovation have peaked in smartphones, and it is much more difficult to offer a new feature that really changes the user’s experience. Apple, for instance, is talking about its better camera experience powered by its more powerful A13 processor — but that’s about it this year.

For many users, these so-called “incremental updates” have started becoming less exciting. Fewer customers are upgrading, many are holding on to their phones for longer, thus impacting the volumes of companies like Apple. It remains to be seen, for example, whether “the A13 Bionic chip and its neural engine tied to the new cameras” really do succeed in driving new demand.

Next year though, could be different. Companies will try to leverage the rollout of the 5G network in the biggest economies. 5G is core technology that can be used to offer fundamentally new experiences that go beyond just an upgradation in speeds.

How is the global smartphone market doing right now?

Over the past few quarters, it’s been flat at best. According to research firm Canalis, shipments for Q2 2019 actually fell 2% year on year. Samsung and Huawei, which hold the top two spots, grew in single digits; Apple, in the third spot, saw its numbers fall 13%. Apple will be hoping to recover in Q3, which, because of the new launches, is traditionally its best quarter. Chinese startups like Xiaomi, Oppo, and Vivo having been dominating the budget phone markets.

How important is India for Apple?

Over the past few quarters, Apple has lost its way in China, its biggest growth market. This is why it will turn focus on to India, where it is already manufacturing iPhones. Buoyed by the success of the iPhone XR after a price cut, Apple has launched its successor, the iPhone 11, at Rs 64,900, much below the Rs 76,900 launch price of the XR. It has also been pushing cashbacks via banking partners, EMI schemes, and other offers that make the phone cheaper.

But even so, an iPhone is still very expensive for the average Indian user. But Apple will win even if it manages to become the dominant player in the luxury segment, which now has very few smartphone makers left.

BECAUSE THE TRUTH INVOLVES US ALL

NITISH VS WHO

The poster wars in Bihar are an early intimation of the 2020 assembly polls, and larger political trends

IN TIMES WHEN a BJP in permanent campaign mode sets the tone, no election is too far away. It is no surprise, then, that the drumbeats of the 2020 assembly polls can already be heard in Bihar. The JD(U) has reacted aggressively to a publicly aired suggestion from the BJP camp that Chief Minister Nitish Kumar should now move to the Centre, leaving Bihar to the care of the Modi-BJP and, to a lesser extent presumably, his own party's second rung. Senior BJP leader and Nitish's deputy Sushil Kumar Modi's tweet in support of "captain" Nitish may not have had the desired calming effect on the controversy, given the curious fact that he tweeted, deleted and then re-tweeted the same remark. And that is not all. The JD(U) has tweaked its Nitish-centric poster campaign after the RJD labelled the earlier one — "Kyun karein vichar, thikke toh hai Nitish Kumar (why should we think again when Nitish Kumar is doing fine)" — as "defeatist". Meanwhile, the RJD poster promoting the idea of a "Tejashwi sarkar" in 2020 has provoked its ally, Congress, to point out that the question of the chief ministerial candidate is still open. The war of words and posters that has begun in Bihar is telling.

It speaks of the unease and discomfort within the two main alliances, the BJP-JD(U) on one side and the RJD-Congress on the other, in a state that was, not too long ago, and till Nitish Kumar switched sides again, being seen as the starting point of the combined Opposition's challenge to the might of the rising BJP. More significantly, in a state where the fundamental bijli-sadak-paani issues are still works-in-progress, and where the turn-around story of the first two Nitish tenures has plateaued, the current political exchange shows how personalities threaten to overtake Bihar's issues and even eclipse them. In a sense, that last bit was foretold. The Modi campaign has set the template for all other parties — they can resist the temptation to mimic its presidential thrust and style at their own peril. It is also true that in a state where parties are weakly institutionalised, politics has long been dominated by personalities anyway. Yet, the promotion of Modi, Nitish and Tejashwi by their respective parties in Bihar today is significant.

The state that has often been a fore-runner of national political trends — be it in terms of the possibilities and then the limits of "social justice", or the balance that "samajik nray" must strike with development or "vikas" — is again a signpost to the future. No longer can issue-based politics be seen in neat-and-tidy opposition to personality-centric politics, it says. The dividing line between the two is blurring inexorably. As in Bihar, so also elsewhere, the political challenge for all players in the time of Modi may be this: To articulate the issue and to tell the story through the persona of the leader.

MIS-SPEAKER

Om Birla's remarks on Brahmin superiority were misjudged, and ill behove his high office

IN INDIA, CASTE can be as mysterious as Schrodinger's cat. Those who have for centuries enjoyed the capital that accrues from being on "top" of an entrenched system of inequality believe it does not exist, either as prejudice or power. But then they believe it does, especially when those pinned down as "lower" castes challenge the hierarchy and ask for their due. It is common, therefore, for reservations to be derided as "casteism". While that is an old, self-serving evasion, Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla's recent speech is striking for its barefaced endorsement of the logic of the caste system. Appropriately enough, Birla was speaking at a meeting in Rajasthan meant to help Brahmin families choose Brahmin spouses for their sons and daughters — strict endogamy is what has sustained the caste order for centuries. The BJP leader went on to laud Brahmins for traditionally occupying the uchha sthan (apex position) in society, a position, he argued, they deserved by virtue of their birth. This was no innocent hyperbole from a politician constrained by the need to keep his constituents happy. Nor was this a reference to caste within a policy framework that seeks to redress deprivation caused by discrimination. This was a heedless extolling of the inequality which has for aeons hobbled Indian society, morally, politically and economically.

Caste is, of course, a tangible, material reality in India — and hence, inescapably political. Leaders like Lalu Prasad, Mulayam Singh Yadav and Mayawati stand for an older mobilisation around caste identity that sought more power for the bahunjan communities. The mammoth 2019 victory of the Narendra Modi-led NDA has been read, in some quarters, as a blunting of that caste politics, and a flattening of the micro-divisions within society by a larger belief system, be it Hindutva or nationalism. Birla's comment, however, reveals an anxiety within the BJP, which professes belief in an amelioration of the inequities of Hindu society while shirking a meaningful or radical anti-caste politics.

But the contradictions of ideology cannot be used to condone Birla's misstep. As someone sworn to uphold the Constitution, which guarantees that the state cannot deny equality of law to any citizen on the basis of caste, religion or birth, he cannot be seen to legitimise the hierarchies that exist in Indian public life, that find enough endorsement in religion and tradition and social practice. Unlike in quantum mechanics, there can be no ambiguity in the politics of the Speaker of the Lower House of Parliament when it comes to his commitment to the letter and spirit of the Constitution.

IN DIFFERENT WORLDS

Enid Blyton stirred the imagination of the young. Her legacy survives the criticisms

IN ENID BLYTON'S The Enchanted Wood (1939), a tree that tears through the skies captivates the story's young protagonists, Jo, Fanny, and Bessie. At the treetop, the kids discover a ladder which takes them through the clouds to a magical land — sometimes welcoming, sometimes not — every time they climb up. The good folks at the Royal Mint of the United Kingdom, it would appear, have ascended a similar ladder. But unfortunately, the Bank's officials seem to have become witness to a landscape where Blyton's blemishes are the only distinguishing features of her literary arc. They have reportedly blocked plans to unveil a 50-pence coin commemorating Blyton. Because it would have led to a backlash due to the author's "racist, sexist and homophobic views".

Blyton built entire worlds for children. From popular mysteries such as The Famous Five, Five Find-Outers, Malory Towers to stand-alone characters like Noddy, her books captured the imagination of children across the world. From "crusty loaves", bacon, "crisp lettuces, dewy and cool" to "jugs of creamy milk", in Blyton's work one can also trace the dietary austerity of a generation in the shadows of World War II. Characters like Moon-Face — with his simple demand of toffee from anyone who wishes to descend the Faraway Tree using the Slippery-Slip (a hole in the floor of his house) — have universal appeal. Georgina's attempts to defy gender tropes, in Famous Five, seem ahead of the curve.

The goliwog — an allegedly racist caricature — has drawn criticism. However, while such literary debates are crucial, they cannot be the only prism to look at a writer and her work. Charles Dickens — Blyton's contemporary — was criticised on grounds of racism and anti-semitism. Chilean poet Pablo Neruda remains the literary genius of the lovelorn despite his now well-known transgressions. Criticisms of Blyton are valid. But they cannot be the only measure of her contribution.

K SRINATH REDDY

ACTS OF VIOLENCE against doctors and other healthcare providers have been reported from different parts of the country in recent months, leading to outrage in the medical profession and strikes by doctors. The battering to death of a 73 year-old doctor by a frenzied mob, in the hospital of an Assam tea estate, was especially brutal and shocked the nation. Elsewhere, too, incidents of assault on healthcare providers and damage to hospital equipment have been frequently reported in different parts of India. Health professional associations have demanded a new law for their protection, extending beyond the deterrent punishments available in existing laws.

The government of India has responded by drafting a legislation which has been placed for public comment in September. This has a wide ambit, covering a broad range of healthcare providers, from doctors, nurses and paramedics to medical and nursing students to ambulance drivers and helpers and a wide array of settings, from hospitals and single doctor clinics to mobile medical units and ambulances. Administrative, security and sanitation staff employed in clinical establishments are not explicitly listed though they, too, are vulnerable to mob violence either because of a direct confrontation or as bystanders rushing in to protect doctors or nurses under assault. Stiff punishments have been proposed, ranging from six months to 10 years depending on the gravity of the offence. Heavy monetary fines, too, have been proposed, ranging from Rs 50,000 to Rs 10,00,000.

Why do healthcare service personnel (as the bill describes them) require a law beyond the provisions of existing criminal laws that protect all persons or property against assault, arson or vandalism? How are they different from the victims of road rage or a neighbours' quarrel?

There is a strong rationale for making a distinction because when a healthcare provider is assaulted, disabled or even killed, the victims of crime also include other patients who are being cared for by that person or many others who have been affected because the services of that clinical establishment are disrupted by the violence and vandalism or stoppage of work by the aggrieved hospital staff or even widespread strikes by doctors. Therefore, the innocent victims of the violence are many. If the death or suffering of one patient sparks violence, the consequence can be the death or suffering of many more patients. The perpetrator of violence bears responsibility for those consequences.

Why do healthcare service personnel (as the bill describes them) require a law beyond the provisions of existing criminal laws that protect all persons or property against assault, arson or vandalism? How are they different from the victims of road rage or a neighbours' quarrel? There is a strong rationale for making a distinction because when a healthcare provider is assaulted, disabled or even killed, the victims of crime also include other patients who are being cared for by that person or many others who have been affected because the services of that clinical establishment are disrupted by the violence and vandalism or stoppage of work by the aggrieved hospital staff or even widespread strikes by doctors.

India is not unique in witnessing the sad spectacle of violence against doctors and other healthcare personnel. Several other countries, too, have reported it. Early in this decade, the problem reached alarming proportions in China — 27.3 assaults per hospital were reported in 2012. Criminal law was amended in 2015 to address this problem which had by then attracted international attention. While extortionist gangs were responsible for some of these attacks, dissatisfaction with medical care was responsible for the majority of the incidents.

While assaults on healthcare personnel or establishments must be deplored and deterred, the multi-factorial causes of this problem must be recognised if we are to reduce the dissatisfaction and distrust that underlies such assaults. The crowded public system is under-resourced, under-staffed and constantly stressed while struggling to cope with the expectations of patients and families. Poor access, uncertain availability and variable quality of care diminish respect and arouse dissatisfaction. The heterogeneous private sector, ranging from the single practitioner to the large corporate hospital, attracts ire for poor quality care or exorbitant costs and exploitative practices. Developing an adequately resourced, widely distributed and well managed healthcare system is essential to reducing the level of public dissatisfaction.

A clear explanation of a patient's condition on admission and periodic updates to anxious relatives build trust and respect. Comforting reports of progress, or consoling words of sympathy in case of setbacks and loss, will be well received if communication channels are maintained between the treatment team and the patient's family or friends. Even if the medical staff are busy, trained medico-social workers or physician assistants can play the role of trust building communicators. All care providers, from doctors and nurses to support staff, must be trained, even as students, to develop and display the attributes of care, concern, courtesy and compassion. Developing effective and empathetic communication skills is as important as acquiring clinical skills.

Quite often, assaults on doctors occur following a patient's death. Whether the death occurred due to a serious health disorder which had a poor outcome despite the best efforts of the treating medical team or there was an element of contributory negligence on the part of one or more members of that team can only be determined by a proper inquiry.

However, wanton violence perpetrated by an anguished and aggrieved relative arises as an instant reaction and does not wait even for an explanation from the treating doctor let alone an inquiry that follows a registered complaint. While effective security measures must be taken to prevent unrestricted intrusions and aggressive reactions, a strong communication link during the period of hospitalisation (even through periodic sms or Whatsapp messages) can create a relationship of trust and avert unpleasant outbursts.

Finally, it must be recognised that uncivilised aggression and mob violence against healthcare personnel will be difficult to curb if the law is seen to be soft or ineffective in curbing or punishing mob violence or lynchings which may be religious, regional, casteist, linguistic or gender based. If violence and aggression appear to get social sanction, healthcare personnel, too, will be among the victims. It is important, therefore, that healthcare providers must speak up against violence of any kind — especially mob violence — and not just when they are the victims.

It is the professional responsibility of doctors to decry any violence as a danger to the physical and mental health of individuals and of society. The 150th birth anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi is a good time for us all to work together to create a non-violent society where every citizen feels secure.

SHWETA BANSAL

"MY DEAR, I don't give a damn." When Margaret Mitchell made Rhett Butler say these words in Gone With the Wind, she had no idea that a formidable criminal lawyer in India would make this the anthem of his life. That man, born on September 14, 1923, was Ram Jethmalani.

Ram led a full life, an unconventional one marked by acute ascent, immense popularity, paradoxes and controversies. He saw India being born; any event, any person, any high profile case that makes up the collective memory of Indians, in some way featured Ram.

He was a child prodigy. Within three months of entering his first school, Tekchand Pathshala, Ram was promoted to the third standard and not much later, to the fifth standard. This made him the youngest, smallest boy in class. One day, when he was bullied by a burly young man who lifted him by his collar, Ram struck the boy, leaving him confounded. In a moment he turned from the victim to the aggressor, a trait that marked much of his life.

At every stage, Ram created a new normal — fighting his own case for admission at the Bar at age 17, making a case for abolition of religion in his law college magazine, straddling two wives, joyous libertine, crusader during the Emergency, he defended political radicals, mob bosses, accused godmen and alleged smugglers with equal ease and loyalty.

Ram was the force behind changing the definition of Hindutva and legitimising the ideologies of the Shiv Sena and BJP within the constitutional framework. He was open, unapologetic and irreverent about it. His single minded pursuit of what he believed in, his preternatural sense of right and wrong and his doggedness stirred emotions, provoked moral judgments but never evoked ambivalence.

Ram's achievements are enviable — some celebrated, others understated. That he was a grand master of law, the undisputed champion of cross examination and rules of evidence is universally acknowledged. Perhaps the least recognised is Ram's contribution in setting up the National Law School of India University (NLS), Bangalore, India's first five-year legal programme for students after intermediate. NLS was a culmination of Ram's friendship with RK Hegde, Karnataka's chief minister. He had represented Hegde's son, Bharat, when the latter was accused in a corruption case. Hegde returned the favour by directing the Bangalore University to allocate 14 acres for the law school on the city's outskirts. The team of Ram, Upendra Baxi and Hegde grandfathered the National University Act of 1986, which led to the NLS starting out as a full university. But when the NLS was inaugurated, Ram and his name were missing. The school's foundation stone was inscribed with the names of VR Reddy, the then Bar Council chairman and Professor Madhav Menon.

A few years later, a young Kashmiri boy, who had failed the entrance for NLS, made his way to Ram, who got him an admission on unusual grounds. The boy reciprocated by acing his class. After five years, he secured a seat at Berkeley but was again struck by the weight of the expenses. This time, too, Ram showed up.

I remember asking him once how he would like to be remembered. His response was: "As a good teacher who could make a difference to the lives of the young." And, why not? Even at 93, he flew every Friday evening after court to Pune to lecture at the Symbiosis College. The man who drank Cognac at home so he wouldn't waste money on expensive liquor in hotels, chartered a plane at his own expense to take a lecture in Chandigarh because, "the students were waiting to hear him".

While his legal credentials are irrefutable, Ram's political legacy is ambiguous. His political career was determined by his personal equations and several of his political actions were on a personal pique. He allowed personal disappointments to move him away from fixed positions, but he had the liver to take the consequences too, he was that sure of his moral radar and intellect. This is what made him invulnerable.

Ram was sui generis. I doubt there will be another quite like him. Sometimes the aggressor, sometimes the defender and at other both, Ram didn't belong to any one man, party, institution or idea. The "sinner with a clean conscience" has finally boarded onward from the "departure lounge". Darlings, lets bow to his free spirit.

ADVANI ON INDIRA
INDIRA GANDHI'S VIEWS on press censorship were an "ominous warning" the Janata leader, LK Advani, said. Commenting on Mrs Gandhi's refusal to rule out press censorship in case she came back to power, Advani, former Information and Broadcasting Minister, said she wanted from the people endorsement of what she did during the Emergency — something the people had refused in 1977. Advani said he was sure democrats would take due note of Mrs Gandhi's statements in Bombay.

Consequences of abrogation

With the Constitution of J&K being rendered infructuous, questions may have arisen about the definition of the territory of J&K, and India's claim to POK

HASEEB A DRABU

BY RESCINDING THE Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir, the territorial integrity of India has been impaired. For the last 30 years, the ideologically secessionist armed insurgency in Kashmir has been threatening the territorial integrity of India. The Indian state with all its might has been successful in not only containing it but in also getting the international community to by and large endorse its position. Ironically, the solution of the present BJP government to the long-standing problem of Kashmir — abrogating its special status in the Constitution of India which they see as the main cause of separatist sentiment — may have ended up not only compromising the territorial integrity of India, but also rekindled the intrusive interest of the international community in the happenings in Kashmir.

Constitution of India, Clause 3 of Article 1 states, "the territory of India shall comprise of the territories of the states". The First Schedule lists out all the states in the Union and defines their individual territorial limits. In the process, it defines the territory of India. There is no other definition of the territory of India as a whole in the Constitution save as a sum of its parts. As the 15th state in the Union, the territorial boundaries of J&K are defined in the First Schedule as, "The territory which immediately before the commencement of this Constitution was comprised in the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir". Unlike all other states whose boundaries are precisely defined, this territorial definition of Jammu and Kashmir is not only ambiguous but also contentious.

There are two parts to this definition: First, the phrase "immediately before the commencement of this Constitution". Which precise date does this refer to? And second, is the term "Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir". This is the only place in the Constitution of India, where the prefix "Indian" has been added to the state of Jammu and Kashmir or for that matter to any other state. In all other references to it in the Constitution, the word used is "State of Jammu and Kashmir". Nowhere does the Constitution of India define what comprises the "Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir". Even historically, Maharaja Hari Singh signed with India the instrument of accession on October 26, 1947 for the entire state; and not the "Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir". So where did the term emanate from and what does it signify? More importantly, what does it connote in terms of its physical boundaries?

The Constituent Assembly of India used this term in the context of the government of India's reference to the UN on its territorial dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir in January 1948. The Constituent Assembly chose not to pre-empt the UN settlement by including the entire state of Jammu and Kashmir as a part of India. The UN had mediated the cessation of hostilities in 1949 and drew a ceasefire line that left 35 per cent of the total area under control of Pakistan. This became the de facto border, the Line of

CR Sasikumar

Control with Pakistan Occupied Kashmir, under the Simla Agreement in 1972.

Indeed, the Constituent Assembly debates and the correspondence between the main dramatis persona discussed the eventuality of the state deciding to join Pakistan post the promised plebiscite and its implication on the Constitution of India. As such, the territory mentioned in the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution means the territory of Jammu and Kashmir under the control of India. Hence, also, the qualification "Indian".

The phrase "immediately before the commencement of this Constitution" can either mean when the Constituent Assembly of India formally adopted the Constitution, that is, November 26, 1949. Or it can be January 26, 1950 when it was promulgated. Taking either date, more than one-third of the state, was under the "illegal" occupation of Pakistan. Did the Constitution of India, then, forego its claim on Pakistan Occupied Kashmir, then? The answer is no.

The reason why the territory of J&K has been ambiguously defined in the Constitution of India is because the Constituent Assembly of India did the politically correct thing of leaving it to the Constituent Assembly of Jammu and Kashmir to discuss, deliberate and define it. The territory of Jammu and Kashmir is defined comprehensively in the now rescinded Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir. The Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir, Part II, para 4, states that "The territory of the State shall comprise all the territories which on the fifteenth day of August, 1947, were under the sovereignty or suzerainty of the Ruler of the State". By this definition, the territory of the state of Jammu and Kashmir includes not only the existing state but also the areas occupied by Pakistan (what they call Azad Jammu and Kashmir and Gilgit-Baltistan) and those areas were ceded to China in 1963 (Shaksam tract, now a part of the Xinjiang Uygur autonomous region).

This, read with Part II, para (3) of the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir — which states, "The State of Jammu and Kashmir is and shall be an integral part of the Union of India" — amplifies the definition of the "Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir" mentioned in the Constitution of India. The point is that it was the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir and not the Constitution of India which made the full territory of Jammu and Kashmir an integral part of the Union of India. In other words, the Constitution of India was dependent on the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir in this regard.

The significance of the territorial definition goes beyond the boundaries of J & K. It is on the basis of this definition of the territory of J&K in the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir that the territorial limits of India got axiomatically defined. Now, with the Constitution (Application to Jammu and Kashmir) Order 2019, the Constitution of Jammu & Kashmir has been rendered infructuous. Along with that goes away the constitutionally defined territorial limits of J&K. What this also means is that the Government of India has, constitutionally speaking, given up its claims on Pakistan Occupied Kashmir and also the territories that Pakistan illegally ceded to China.

The Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir even provided 25 seats in the state legislature for the elected representatives of the "occupied" areas. It was stipulated, under Section 48 (I) of the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir, that these seats would remain vacant (and reserved) and would not be taken into account for reckoning the total membership of the assembly, till these areas of the state remain under occupation. Significantly, the J&K State Reorganisation Act 2019, had reduced the number of these vacant seats to 24. Is this formalising the Aksai Chin ceding?

The significance of the territorial definition goes beyond the boundaries of J&K. It is on the basis of this definition of the territory of J&K in the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir that the territorial limits of India got axiomatically defined. Now, with the Constitution (Application to Jammu and Kashmir) Order 2019, the Constitution of Jammu & Kashmir has been rendered infructuous. Along with that goes away the constitutionally defined territorial limits of J&K. What this also means is that the Government of India has, constitutionally speaking, given up its claims on Pakistan Occupied Kashmir and also the territories that Pakistan illegally ceded to China.

Given the fact that the territory of India is an aggregation of the territories of the states, the Constitution Order 2019 has effectively changed the territorial boundary of India. While the Constitution explicitly provides for expansion, "such other territories as may be acquired", there is no provision for Parliament to reduce the territory of India. Yet that is precisely what the Constitution Order 2019 has done. This in itself is a sufficient ground for it to be struck down by the Supreme Court.

Spending issues

The Constitution's Seventh Schedule, which differentiates between spending by the Centre and states, needs a re-look

BIBEK DEBROY

THERE ARE AT least three reasons for a discourse on the central sector (CS) and centrally sponsored schemes (CSSs). The difference between a CS and a CSS is that for the former, all expenditure is borne by the Union government. For a CSS, part of the expenditure is borne by the Union government. States bear the rest. The state contribution is contingent on the type of state — north east and Himalayan states versus the others. The first reason for a discussion is that the present CSS basket has an expiry date of March 31, 2020 which is co-terminus with recommendations of the 14th Finance Commission. Therefore, from April 1, 2020, we will have a new CSS basket. Indeed, we need to plan for that CSS basket in advance, since the 2020-21 Union and state budgets will need to factor in the new CSS basket. Procedurally, a CS is somewhat different from a CSS. One can argue that revamping a CS is the Union government's prerogative, while revamping a CSS, without consultation with states, is not.

Second, the ToR (terms of reference) for the 15th Finance Commission mention a re-examination of CSSs, in a way. Perhaps, one should quote that: "Achievements in implementation of flagship schemes of Government of India, disaster resilient infrastructure, sustainable development goals, and quality of expenditure." For these, and some other areas, "The Commission may consider proposing measurable performance-based incentives for states, at the appropriate level of government." And third, the Union government is taking a look at CSSs. Hence, all three triggers converge.

Note the two earlier committees: The former Planning Commission's 2001 B K Chaturvedi report on restructuring of CSSs and the Niti Aayog's 2015 Sub-Group of Chief Ministers' Report on rationalisation of CSSs. One shouldn't read too much into etymology, but "restructuring" and "rationalisation" are distinct expressions. If a mere rearrangement is done, that's restructuring of sorts.

The Chaturvedi report suggested that nine flagship schemes (MGNREGA, IAY, SSA, NRHM, and so on) should remain as CSSs, while another six schemes (JNNURM, RKVY and so on) should become CSSs. Fifteen is a large enough number of schemes for public expenditure. Ideally, the Chaturvedi Report should have recommended scrapping of all others. But, that would have been too drastic, so, it didn't. So when implemented, all schemes were repackaged and retained. It was restructuring in the sense of rearrangement. The word "rationalisation" suggests more than restructuring. It implies a rationale for the continuation of existing schemes, scrapping of some, and even introduction of fresh ones.

The sub-group of chief ministers talked about implementation and divided schemes into core and optional ones. However, the core of the recommendation was the following: "The Sub-Group recommends that the existing CSS should be restructured and their number should be reduced to a maximum of 30 schemes. All these schemes would be 'Umbrella Schemes', with every scheme having a large number of components with a uniform funding pattern."

Thereafter, there are ostensibly 28 CSSs, divided into "core of the core" and "core". But these 28 are umbrella schemes and large umbrellas at that. For purposes of illustration, let me take one scheme, the "Green Revolution" scheme, implemented by the Department of Agriculture, Cooperation and Farmers' Welfare. A scrutiny of the Union Budget papers will tell you that this umbrella scheme covers "Rashtriya Krishi Vikas Yojana, National Food Security Mission, Agriculture Marketing, Information, Integrated Scheme on Agricultural Cooperation, Integrated Scheme on Agriculture Census and Statistics, National Agri-Tech Infrastructure, National Mission on Horticulture, National Mission on Oil Seed and Oil Palm, National Project on Agro-Forestry, National Project on Organic Farming, National Project on Soil Health and Fertility, Organic Value Chain Development for North East Region, Paramparagat Krishi Vikas Yojana, Rain-fed Area Development and Climate Change and Sub-Missions on Agriculture Extension, Agriculture Mechanisation, Plant Protection and Plant Quarantine & Seed and Planting Material." Clearly, the figure of 28 is misleading. Counted properly, the number of CSSs depends partly on how one defines a CSS. But, the number will be close to two hundred. Clearly, this is unsatisfactory.

This issue isn't new. At the 3rd National Development Council (NDC) meeting in November 1954, "He (Shri Hanumanthaiah) also referred to the difficulties of the states in finding resources to meet their share of expenditure on the schemes sponsored by the central government and suggested consultation with the states before directives in this regard were issued." At another meeting in December 1956, it was pointed out that, "a large number of schemes were sponsored by other ministries also e.g. training schemes of the Ministry of Health and certain schemes for industry of the Home Ministry. The State (Madhya Pradesh) did not have money outside the Plan which could be provided to match the funds made available as Central assistance."

In 1967, a sub-committee of the NDC was set up to examine CSSs. Some points are evident. First, given the paucity of resources, there can only be a limited number of CSs and CSSs combined, such as the Chaturvedi figure of 15. Second, there is an optimal level of governance at which public goods are best provided.

The Seventh Schedule was a product of historical evolution and circumstances and contemplated a certain structure of this optimal level of governance. It isn't cast in stone. Why should then there be CSSs for items in the State List (such as health)? If the Union government should contribute for health because it is nationally important, why should states not contribute for defence? Third, a CSS restructuring/rationalisation debate requires a relook at the Seventh Schedule. Fourth, this can't be done without consultation with states at an appropriate forum.

Deals that hurt

India could disadvantage itself further vis-a-vis China by joining free trade pacts

THIS REFERS TO the editorial, 'Seize the pact' (IE, September 10). I agree with its assertion that "the government will have to think through its strategy on joining trade pacts". Trade ministers of the participating countries in the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) will confer in November, when the leaders of these countries meet for the ASEAN summit. There is pressure on India from the proponents of free trade to join RCEP. However, free trade is not a black and white affair, it never was. Therefore, I would like to take issues with the editorial's main point, "Joining these FTAs (free trade agreements under the RCEP umbrella) will not only gradually facilitate the country's integration with global value chains, but provide greater opportunities for investment".

RCEP is an attempt to integrate ASEAN countries and the bloc's FTA partners — India, China, Japan, South Korea, Australia and New Zealand — in a free trade zone. Initially posed as an alternative to the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), RCEP has gained a new dimension after the US pulled out of the TPP and subsequently initiated a trade war, largely against China.

China would be looking to compensate for the export loss in the US turf, and RCEP provides the country a viable platform for this purpose. That is why joining the pact will be detrimental to India's interests. Even without an FTA with China, India's trade deficit with the country has risen 13 times in the last decade. China, according to a NITI Aayog paper, accounts for around 50 per cent of India's trade deficit. And the deficit is widening every year. Joining RCEP would tantamount to de facto signing an FTA with China and giving the country market access to India.

The NITI Aayog paper also identified India's major imports from and exports to China. The list reveals a disturbing trend. While China exports finished manufactured goods like electrical machinery, telecom equipment, audio and video recorders, organic chemicals and plastic articles, Indian top exports to China predominantly consist of raw materials like ores, copper, sulphur, salt, mineral fuels, oils and bituminous substances.

Those who advocate joining RCEP on grounds of integration with global value chain — including your editorial — should take note of this trade composition. Global or local, production value chains are not homogenous string of production process; they are value chains driven by very large multinational companies which produce the final finished goods and reap maximum benefit out of that chain. The composition of Indo-Chinese trade indicates that Chinese companies are those engines of value chain. India languishes at the bottom end of that chain as a raw material supplier. Another fallout could be decimation of Indian industries that would be in direct competition with these big Chinese companies.

In recent times, India's import of mobile handsets from China has gone down, but the flip side of it is that imports of mobile components from China has increased manifold. Chinese mobile handset factories operate as assembling centres on Indian soil. Fledgling handset makers like Micromax and Karbonn in the country have been pushed out of the market and Indians do not gain enough employment opportunities. This does not bode well for the economy.

India's experience with FTAs has not been encouraging, except for the FTA with Sri Lanka. Trade gaps with ASEAN, South Korea and Japan have been increasing. The FTAs have resulted in the isolation of Indian companies, as Indian products on whom regular indirect taxes have been levied often face competition with goods imported from these FTA countries with lower or zero tariff rates. In 2017-18, India had a trade deficit of $104 billion with all RCEP countries.

Much has been showcased about Mode 4 in last year's ministerial meeting of RCEP.

Despite resistance from countries like Singapore, Australia and New Zealand, it was claimed that progress has been made under RCEP negotiations to liberalise member countries' services markets and allow movement of skilled professionals. Though the final outcome needs to be observed, there are other reasons for scepticism. Mode 4, till now, helped India in sending mainly IT professionals at cheaper wage rates to destinations where local labour is costlier. But with sources of such cheap labour abundant in other countries — Malaysia, Vietnam and Philippines, for example — it is doubtful whether India will have any major advantage even if the services markets of Australia, New Zealand and Singapore are sufficiently opened.

Various estimates show that RCEP's share in the world GDP may touch 50 per cent by 2050. The fear that India may be left out if it decides not to join the group is real. But given the economic clout of China and other economies, India may find it very difficult to grab a significant share of the this RCEP cake. The country could, instead, do well to make realistic attempts to seize larger shares of smaller pies in regional trade cooperation — BIMSTEC (Bay of Bengal Initiative for Multi-Sectoral Technical and Economic Cooperation), for example.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi and his Nepalese counterpart K P Sharma Oli jointly inaugurated the 69-km long cross-border petroleum pipeline in Nepal. This initiative will help enhance the energy security of Nepal, it will substantially cut down transit costs and enhance trade connectivity between India and Nepal. The pipeline will carry two million metric tonne of clean petroleum products at an affordable price to Nepal. The initiative is also significant because the country is often dependent on India for fuel.

THIS REFERS TO the report, 'Impassable Gurpreet makes it possible' (IE, September 11). A goal less draw against Asian champions, Qatar, is probably India's biggest achievement in international football in recent years. India's goalkeeper played a very important role in this achievement by thwarting the forwards of Qatar.

Indians to benefit as UK announces new two-year post-study work visa

NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE UK government announced on Wednesday a new two-year post-study work visa, a long-standing demand from international students, including Indians.

According to a statement by the British High Commission in Delhi, “The new ‘Graduate’ route will be open to all international students – including those from India – who have valid UK immigration status as a student and have successfully completed a course of study in any subject at undergraduate level or above at an approved UK higher education provider. The visa will allow eligible students to work, or look for

Push to boost STEM is good news for Indian students

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the new visa programme follows the creation of a fast-track visa route for scientists and the removal of the limit on PhD students moving into the skilled work visa route, which collectively aim to cement the UK as a science superpower and a world leader in the STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) sector.

onto the skilled work visa if they find a job which meets the skill requirement of the route.

The visa will offer opportunities to work or look for work after graduating. However, unlike the route which closed in 2012, this new route will also include safeguards to ensure only genuine, credible students are eligible.

This follows a shake-up of immigration rules announced by British Prime Minister Boris Johnson in August to encourage top scientists to move to the UK.

British High Commissioner to India, Dominic Asquith said, “This is fantastic news for Indian students, who will now be able to spend more time in the UK after completing their degree, allowing them to gain further skills and experience.”

US designates Pak Taliban chief as global terrorist

Under Noor Wali Mehsud's leadership, TTP grew more deadlier, analysts say

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
WASHINGTON, ISLAMABAD, SEPTEMBER 11

THE US has slapped sanctions on the chief of the banned Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) Noor Wali Mehsud and designated him as a global terrorist, as the Trump administration unveiled new tools to pursue terror suspects, their financiers and supporters globally.

Mehsud was designated as a ‘Specially Designated Global Terrorist’ by the US Department of State on Tuesday, on the eve of the 18th anniversary of the 9/11 attacks.

Mehsud took over the Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan in June 2018 following the death of Mullah Fazlullah in Afghanistan.

“Noor Wali, also known as Mufti Noor Wali Mehsud, was named the leader of Tehrik-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) in June 2018 following the death of former TTP leader Mullah Fazlullah,” according to a State Department statement.

“Under Noor Wali’s leadership, TTP has claimed responsibility for numerous deadly terrorist attacks across Pakistan,” it said.

The US actions seek to deny these terrorists the resources to plan and carry out attacks. All of their property and interests in property subject to US jurisdiction are blocked, and US persons are generally prohibited from engaging in any transactions with them, the statement said.

Interestingly, Mehsud’s designation came on the same day India described Pakistan as the “epicentre” of global terrorism.

While countering Pakistan’s offensive against India on the Kashmir issue at the 42nd UN Human Rights Council session in Geneva, Secretary (East) in the External Affairs Ministry, Vijay Thakur Singh, said “the world is aware that this fabricated narrative comes from the epicentre of global terrorism, where ring leaders were sheltered for years. This nation conducts cross-border terrorism as a form of ‘alternate diplomacy’”.

Since its establishment in 2007, the TTP has remained a potent threat and the most dangerous Islamist terrorist organisation in Pakistan. The TTP has been involved in more than 1,400 terrorist attacks in Pakistan over the last 12 years.

The revitalised TTP under Mehsud appears to have grown deadlier, according to an article published by the Jamestown Foundation, a US-based institute for research and analysis, in May.

Suspension of UK Parliament unlawful, court rules

MICHAEL HOLDEN & GUY FAULCONBRIDGE
LONDON, SEPTEMBER 11

SCOTLAND’S HIGHEST court of appeal ruled on Wednesday that Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s decision to suspend parliament was unlawful, deepening the uncertainty over Britain’s departure from the European Union.

Johnson’s government said it would appeal the court ruling on the suspension, which has been criticised by Opposition lawmakers as undemocratic, suggesting the Prime Minister would stick to his Brexit plan and keep Parliament shut.

With only seven weeks until Britain is due to quit the EU, the future of Brexit is as unclear as ever, with the possible outcomes

Boris Johnson's government has said it would appeal the court ruling ranging from the world’s fifth largest economy leaving without a deal to the 2016 referendum being overturned.

“We are calling for Parliament to be recalled immediately,” Scottish National Party lawmaker Joanna Cherry told Sky News after the verdict by Scotland’s Inner Court of Session.

A government spokesman expressed disappointment at the decision. “(We) will appeal to the UK Supreme Court. The UK government needs to bring forward a strong domestic legislative agenda. Proroguing parliament is the legal and necessary way of delivering this.”

Johnson, who was a figurehead for the Vote Leave campaign in the 2016 referendum when 52 per cent of voters backed Brexit, has said he needs to suspend, or prorogue, Parliament to kick off his Conservative agenda. REUTERS

Rocket explodes at US embassy in Kabul; fighting picks up in Afghanistan

KABUL, SEPTEMBER 11

A ROCKET exploded at the US embassy in Afghanistan just minutes into Wednesday, the anniversary of the 9/11 attack on the United States, but officials at the compound declared all-clear about an hour later and reported no injuries.

A plume of smoke rose over central Kabul shortly after midnight and sirens could be heard. Inside the embassy, employees heard this message over the loudspeaker: “An explosion caused by a rocket has occurred on compound.”

There was no immediate comment from Afghan officials. The NATO mission, which is nearby, also said no personnel had been injured.

Fighting has picked up in several areas of northern Afghanistan, officials said on Wednesday, days after the collapse of talks between the United States and the Taliban aimed at agreeing the withdrawal of thousands of US troops.

Officials said there was fighting in at least 10 provinces, with the heaviest clashes in the northern regions of Takhar, Baghlan, Kunduz and Badakhshan, where the Taliban have been pressing security forces for weeks.

forces retook the district of Koran-Wa-Monjan in Badakhshan, the defence ministry said in a statement. The district, which fell to the Taliban in July, had offered the insurgents valuable mining revenues from its rich reserves of the famous blue lapis lazuli stone.

It was the third district security forces have secured during a push in the province over recent days after Yamgan and Warduj, which the Taliban had held for the past four years.

In the neighbouring province of Takhar, however, local officials said government forces had pulled out of Yangi Qala and Darqad districts, while fighting was going on in Khawja Char and Ishkamesh district.

PEOPLE WHO were too young on 9/11 to even remember their lost loved ones, and others for whom the grief is still raw, paid tribute with wreath-layings and the solemn roll call of the dead Wednesday as America marked the 18th anniversary of the worst terror attack on US soil.

“Eighteen years. We will not forget. We cannot forget,” Bud Salter, who lost his sister, Catherine, said at ground zero.

anniversary of personal and permanent loss.”

“It’s the day that has replayed in your memory a thousand times over. The last kiss. The last phone call. The last time hearing those precious words, ‘I love you,’” the President said.

capital were able to go home that day and hug our families because of the courage and selflessness of your families,” said Pence, who was an Indiana congressman at the time. Officials concluded the attackers had been aiming the plane toward Washington.

Nearly 3,000 people were killed when terrorist-piloted planes slammed into the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and the field in Pennsylvania.

New Zealand PM apologises for her party’s handling of sex assault claims

WELLINGTON, SEPTEMBER 11

NEW ZEALAND Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern apologised Wednesday for her party’s handling of an alleged sexual assault, as a top ally was forced to resign.

In the most serious scandal Ardern has faced since she took office in late 2017, the centre-left leader admitted “mistakes were made” after a Labour Party volunteer accused a senior party staffer of assault last year.

“Raising an allegation of sexual assault is an incredibly difficult thing to do — for additional distress to be caused through the way these allegations are handled is incredibly distressing,” Ardern said in a statement.

The 19-year-old woman alleges the staffer sexually assaulted her at his home in February last year and she reported it to Labour Party president Nigel Haworth.

An internal investigation recommended no action against the man and Haworth said the complainant did not inform him of the seriousness of the allegations.

The woman disputed this, providing media with documents she said supported her version of events. Other volunteers also said their complaints to the party were not taken seriously.

Ardern said she discussed the issue with Haworth on Wednesday as she tried to address the scandal. “Whilst he stands by the statements he made on this matter, I believe mistakes were made,” she said.

MARGRETHE VESTAGER, WHO HAS ALREADY HANDED OUT BILLION-DOLLAR FINES TO SILICON VALLEY FIRMS, HAS WON NEW POWERS

EU’s new digital czar: ‘Most powerful regulator of big tech on the planet’

BRUSSELS, SEPTEMBER 11

FOR FIVE years, Margrethe Vestager was the scourge of Silicon Valley, levying billions of dollars in fines and initiating investigations against Google, Apple and Facebook for violating antitrust laws and harming consumers.

As the European Union’s competition commissioner, she, and her army of lawyers, became heroes to many critics of Big Tech, even as they were loathed in some corporate offices, and in the White House.

“She hates the United States,” US President Donald Trump said,

“perhaps worse than any person I’ve ever met.”

On Tuesday, Vestager assumed more power than ever, expanding her portfolio to become the equivalent of the EU’s digital czar.

It’s a job that analysts say will give her unmatched regulatory reach at a time when public anger is rising over issues like privacy, disinformation, data management and the enormous reach of the largest technology companies — like Google, Apple, Amazon and Facebook — into the everyday lives of billions of people.

“Margrethe Vestager will be the most powerful regulator of Big Tech on the planet,” said

Thomas Vinje, a veteran antitrust lawyer based in Brussels. “She will have more leverage than anyone else in the world.”

Vestager’s enhanced status reflects the EU’s ambition to become the most activist tech regulator in the world, creating a far-reaching role for itself in the global economy. European officials see an opening to become the trusted global regulator, especially as their American counterparts have been criticized for doing too little.

As the digital giants branch out into new areas, including finance with Facebook’s proposed Libra cryptocurrency, regulators are finding it harder to keep up with the complex, highly sophisticated and opaque nature of the companies they’re meant to oversee, experts say.

Vestager’s new role, which combines digital regulation and antitrust enforcement, could be better suited to the new era of digital domination, according to supporters of more aggressive regulation.

“Europe is clearly signalling that massive data harvesting must be considered a critical part of competition and regulatory analysis of market forces,” said Gene Kimmelman, the former chief counsel for policy in the antitrust division of the Justice Department during the Obama administration, referring to the huge amounts of personal information gathered by companies like Facebook. “It indicates Europe increasingly considers control of massive data likely plays a critical role in attaining dominance in digital markets.”

The unique characteristics of the digital world, including the inability for both consumers and regulators to see the algorithms that determine what users see in search results and news feeds, and what advertisers pay to reach them, make righting any potential wrongs in the industry even harder, said Kimmelman, who now works for consumer-rights nonprofit Public Knowledge.

As part of her antitrust portfolio, she will be responsible for assessing if companies are using their market share to unfairly block out smaller competitors. And from her new perch as digital regulator, she can advance new rules on company behavior, including how they collect, use and store users’ data; and how they shield themselves against cyberattacks.

“Concentration of power is an issue,” said Vinje, the antitrust lawyer. “There is an efficiency benefit in having those powers combined in one person, but on the other hand there is always a benefit in debate and division of power, so one can question if this results in too much power.” NYT

Into the upside down

A country that prides itself on its common sense and moderation is doing ever stranger things

SO MANY extraordinary events are happening in British politics that it is impossible to tell the normal from the abnormal. This is not only disorientating—all the talk of “coups” and “traitors” can unsettle even the most philosophical of souls. It is also dangerous. A quick glance at history shows that terrible things can happen when you normalise the abnormal. Jacob Rees-Mogg, the leader of the House of Commons, maintains that the British constitution can “bend to a passing storm”. But if the storm is a hurricane that rages on for years, it can also break.

Boris Johnson was elected over his more moderate rival, Jeremy Hunt, with 93,000 votes out of a turnout of just 150,000—all that remains of a Conservative Party that was once 3m strong. More than half are over 55 years old, 70% are men, 97% are white and, as a group, they have far more authoritarian and Eurosceptic views than the population at large. Yet this mockery of a mandate has not prevented Mr Johnson from pursuing an unbendingly extreme policy. He has filled his cabinet with people willing to sign up to a no-deal Brexit, a minority position in the parliamentary party. He has suspended Parliament in order to reduce the amount of time available to debate the rights and wrongs of such a Brexit, a decision that many regard as a constitutional outrage. His justification for this is that the “will of the people”, as embodied in the referendum result of 2016, must be honoured. But there is no evidence that the 52% who voted for Brexit support the no-deal variety. One recent poll shows that Britons don’t trust Mr Johnson to make the right decision on Brexit by a margin of 55% to 34%.

Mr Johnson made his second-ever appearance as prime minister in the House of Commons on September 3rd, only to suffer one of the worst humiliations of any leader. Twenty-one Tories voted with the opposition to outlaw leaving the EU without a deal. Mr Johnson’s response was to purge the rebels from his party. They included two former chancellors (one of whom was in office just seven weeks ago), five other former cabinet ministers and Winston Churchill’s grandson, Sir Nicholas Soames. At the same time a former Tory prime minister, Sir John Major, is party to a lawsuit accusing Mr Johnson of acting unconstitutionally.

With the reality-based wing of his party decimated, Mr Johnson is a prisoner of a narrow clique that combines ideological fervour with personal eccentricity. Steve Baker talks about bulldozing the House of Commons into the Thames. John Redwood is so lacking in the milk of human kindness that he makes Mr Gradgrind look like a lactating mother. This week Mr Rees-Mogg chose to listen to an era-defining debate while lying prone across the Commons benches, as if on a chaise longue, providing the Labour Party with an ideal election poster.

Even more remarkable than the mainstreaming of extremists is the normalisation of a no-deal Brexit. During the referendum campaign, no Leaver mentioned the possibility of a no-deal Brexit, just as few brought up the issue of the Irish border. Brexiteers assured the country that negotiating a trade deal with the European Union would be the easiest thing in the world. Now, Mr Johnson believes that you have to support the possibility of no-deal to remain a Tory, and Nigel Farage, the leader of the Brexit Party, regards no-deal as the only acceptable option.

Anti-Brexit protesters demonstrate outside the Houses of Parliament in London on September 3. Reuters

In normal times, voters can shift to the opposition if one side goes berserk. But the Labour Party has a good claim to have arrived ahead of the Conservative Party in crazy town, by electing Jeremy Corbyn leader. Mr Corbyn has devoted his life to supporting obscure and often repellent causes. His guests in the House of Commons have included IRA sympathisers and Holocaust deniers. His inner circle of advisers includes a former communist, Andrew Murray, who has lauded North Korea and praised Stalin. For all the talk of his being an ineffectual party leader, Mr Corbyn has done a very good job of taking over the party’s executive committee and putting in place automatic “trigger ballots” which will allow activists to eject MPs who don’t toe the Corbyn line.

British politics is now trapped in a weird impasse as these two extremists face each other across the aisle, bellowing and finger-jabbing. Mr Johnson, who claims that he doesn’t want an election, is now demanding one and Mr Corbyn, who claims that he does want an election, is refusing to give him one. But it is hard to summon up a laugh as events whirl out of control. Extremism is as addictive as roulette. The Conservative Party may fight the next election as a full-blown no-deal-Brexit party, forging a loose alliance with Mr Farage, and adding fury at political correctness and social breakdown to a powerful populist mix.

Extremism in one party also legitimises extremism in another. If Mr Corbyn wins the next election—which is more likely than most Tories realise—he will be emboldened by the Conservatives’ recent behaviour. A Tory opposition will find it hard to accuse Mr Corbyn of sacrificing the economy on the altar of ideology when it has done exactly that. By arguing that the “will of the people” matters more than the rights of minorities or the conventions of the constitution, the Tories have supplied Mr Corbyn with the weapons he needs to push through a radical hard-left programme. All he needs is a majority, which they are doing their best to provide.

Neverending story

There are some inspiring examples of countries righting themselves after periods of abnormality. Matteo Salvini, Italy’s fiery populist, has been weakened by his increasingly outrageous behaviour. But with both parties controlled by fanatical factions and Britain’s uncodified constitution depending on informal rules that extremists do not respect, it is difficult to see a way out of the mess. The great test for Britain is not just whether it can leave Europe with its economy intact. It is whether it can leave without doing lasting damage to institutions that were always more delicate than either Leavers or Remainers imagined.

Forward to the past

An election campaign in Sri Lanka stirs old ghosts

THE FRONT-RUNNER in Sri Lanka’s presidential election in November has a boring message. It is designed to be wonderfully soothing to those alarmed by the political chaos of the past couple of years, as the president and prime minister have feuded—and indeed to those for whom the brutal civil war that ended only a decade ago still casts a frightening shadow.

Gotabaya Rajapaksa, who declared his candidacy last month, assures voters that the future is one of peaceful, “knowledge-based” development for all. It will be led by technocrats, and be free of the curse of politicking. His years as an army officer, “Gota” says, will ensure crisp, meritocratic efficiency.

The blandness of Mr Rajapaksa’s campaign is the message. For there is another Gotabaya, from under whom Sri Lanka has already once had to crawl. Ten years ago a horrendous civil war ended in a massive government assault on Tamil rebels on a narrow strip of beach in the north of the island, overseen by Mr Rajapaksa, who was secretary of defence at the time. There, Tamil commanders and their families were killed by troops meant to be accepting their surrender, but not before thousands of civilians trapped in the fighting had perished too.

A 26-year-old war had ended, with unspeakable crimes on both sides. But when the victorious government was returned in a landslide in 2010, it continued to see enemies everywhere. It grew ever more authoritarian as it championed a Buddhist Sinhalese chauvinism at the expense of Hindu, Muslim and Christian minorities. A notable critic, Lasantha Wickrematunge, a newspaper editor, had been murdered in 2009. Others began to disappear in Colombo, the capital, into white vans driven by pro-government goons. The chief justice was impeached and the rest of the judiciary

Should the Rajapaksas make a comeback, they may suffer from new flaws as well as old. Although they pooh-pooh the idea, it seems quite possible that Gota and Mahinda will fight over every bit of power at the country’s expense ary brought into line. Meanwhile, Tamils in the north still lived in fear of the security forces. It was a huge relief to many when the government lost power in an electoral upset in 2015.

All this matters because the ousted government was a Rajapaksa family business. Mr Rajapaksa’s brother, Mahinda, was president; another brother, Basil, oversaw the economy; a fourth was speaker of parliament. Gota wanted credit for winning the war, and bridled at claims of war crimes. He ran the security services during the era of white-van terror. He had a foul temper and a threatening tongue.

Both Basil and Mahinda are frank enough, when asked, to admit that Gota needs to keep talking about policies, not the past. Yet again and again he seems drawn back to that other country in which part of him still dwells, arguing that his achievements in ending the war and rebuilding the north have never been fully acknowledged. His greatest regret, he says, is not being properly understood. Even reports that he kept sharks in tanks are unfair: they helped to soothe his nerves and anyway, he says, stretching out his hands, they weren’t that big.

There is another worrying aspect to

Sri Lanka’s former defense secretary Gotabaya Rajapaksa in Katunayake, Sri Lanka, in April. Reuters

Gota’s prospective return. It comes with the full Rajapaksa package. Basil is overseeing an efficient, high-tech campaign—dreamt up, he says, while serving time in prison for corruption. Mahinda, who sparked a constitutional crisis last year by attempting to supplant the prime minister in a parliamentary coup, now intends to win the post via parliamentary elections next year.

Should the Rajapaksas make a comeback, they may suffer from new flaws as well as old. Although they pooh-pooh the idea, it seems quite possible that Gota and Mahinda will fight over every bit of power at the country’s expense. Mahinda, the oldest brother, is a sun king, his chair in his meeting room a hand-span wider than the others. He says the post of prime minister will be the crucial one in government. Across town, Gota argues for a strong executive presidency.

If there is an alternative to Rajapaksa rule, it is taking an excruciating time to declare itself. It is in the power of Ranil Wickremesinghe, the prime minister, as head of one of the country’s two big parties, to anoint a challenger. The 70-year-old seems to have thought of himself as the ideal candidate. But after a dismal term as prime minister, no one in his party shares his view. He has not yet come round to endorsing the ally with the best numbers in the polls, Sajith Premadasa, son of Sri Lanka’s third president. Mr Premadasa’s chief backers admit that not even the candidate himself really knows what he believes in. But he is popular enough—and, better yet, his name is not Rajapaksa.

SECTOR WATCH
BANKINGState-owned banks step up NPA sale to ARCs to clean balance sheetSUNNY VERMA
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

PUBLIC SECTOR banks have increased the pace of sale of non performing assets (NPAs) to asset reconstruction companies in order to trim their NPAs. State-owned banks have put up nearly Rs 10,000 crore worth of bad loan assets for sale to ARCs since July, more than double of total bad debt of Rs 4,000 crore that was sold to ARCs in April-June.

After the Reserve Bank of India amended its stressed asset resolution framework, banks no longer have the compulsion to take NPA accounts to the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC) for resolution. They now have the flexibility to resolve bad debt.

The RBI's Prudential Framework for Resolution of Stressed Assets issued on June 7, 2019, which replaced the earlier controversial February 12, 2018, circular on resolution, allows banks sale of stressed standard assets that are in default, as part of the resolution process. "It's not feasible to take every resolution case to the insolvency court as that is time consuming and slows down the recovery process. We have identified large number of assets that can be resolved by sale to ARCs," a senior banker with a state-owned bank said, asking not to be named.

Punjab National Bank this month put up for sale nearly a dozen NPA assets to recover dues of more than Rs 1,234 crore. The accounts include Visa Steel, which has dues of Rs 441.83 crore, IndBarath Energy (Utkal) Rs 414.23 crore, Aster Private Ltd Rs 113.57 crore and Om Shiv Estates Rs 100.16 crore. The lender has invited bids for sale on 100 per cent cash basis by September 20. Other banks including State Bank of India have also followed this route to prune NPAs and boost recoveries.

The lenders typically get 15 per cent upfront cash on the sale value of the assets while for the remaining 85 per cent,

PSBs have put up nearly Rs 10,000 crore worth of bad loan assets for sale to ARCs since July, more than double of total bad debt of Rs 4,000 crore that was sold to ARCs in April-June the ARCs issue security receipts to banks. While the RBI rules require ARCs to pay a minimum of 15 per cent upfront, most lenders are keen to get 100 per cent cash payment against sale of assets. To promote the ARC mode of resolution of stressed assets, the government has allowed foreign direct investors to pick up 100 per cent stake in ARCs.

Resolution through ARCs has been growing over the recent years. The book value of loan assets taken over by the ARCs from banks and financial institutions have risen to Rs 3.79 lakh crore in fiscal year 2018-19, up from Rs 3.23 lakh crore in 2017-18 and Rs 2.56 lakh crore in 2016-17. Banks typically offload their bad debts to around 24 ARCs currently operating in India to clean up their balance sheet.

In order to promote resolution through sale of NPAs, an RBI-constituted expert committee, in its report earlier this month, has recommended that foreign portfolio investors (FPIs) be allowed to directly buy distressed assets from banks. "FPI investors may also be allowed to directly purchase distressed loans from banks within permissible annual prudential limits defined by RBI in consultation with the Government of India," according to report of the Task Force on the Development of Secondary Market for Corporate Loans. The central bank has recently allowed banks to sell certain category of bad assets to eligible External Commercial Borrowing lenders.

REPORT FRAUDS WITHOUT FEAR OF REPERCUSSION: MoS FINANCE

ENSECONOMIC BUREAU
MUMBAI, SEPTEMBER 11

UNION MINISTER of State for Finance Anurag Thakur on Wednesday asked banks not to use the Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC) for every stressed asset but refer such matters to the National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT) only when other resolution mechanisms fail.

There should be an attempt to resolve stressed assets outside the NCLT process, as this would help banks and the business community, Thakur said. "I would therefore request bankers to try to resolve stressed assets in the right earnest and refer cases to NCLT only if satisfied resolution outside the NCLT is not available. We should not use NCLT for every case. This is going to help the business community, banks as well," he said at the 72nd annual general meeting of Indian Banks' Association (IBA).

He assured bankers to take decision to lend to the industry without any fear of 'witch-hunting' in future by any investigative agencies. "I want to assure you (bankers) that the decisions taken by you in course of business in good faith with a sound

Other forms of resolution may help faster loan recovery

THE GOVERNMENT has appealed to banks to first explore NPA resolution outside the framework of Insolvency and Bankruptcy Court, and take cases to National Company Law Tribunal only if other forms of resolution fail.

In the backdrop of resolution cases getting delayed in various benches of NCLT, other forms of resolution could lead to faster recovery of loans with the option of invoking the IBC always remaining with the banks. The banks are increasingly selling NPAs to Asset Reconstruction Companies in recent months to boost recovery, as an alternate to the IBC-led resolution process.

business rationale will not face any witch-hunt," Thakur said.

Bankers should timely report frauds without any fear of repercussions, he said. Thakur said despite a 110 basis points repo rate reduction by the Reserve Bank of India over the last few months, banks have not passed on the full benefit to the consumers. "Only a fraction of the rate cuts benefits were passed-on by the banks to borrowers. I appeal to banks to further pass on the benefits of the rate cuts to companies which will lead to an increase in the consumption cycle, thereby, leading to a revival in their investments," he said.

In the last five years, the government has recapitalised public sector banks (PSBs) by over Rs 2 trillion, and recently also announced an immediate capital infusion of Rs 70,000 crore in these lenders. Thakur said the banks are being encouraged to lend more to NBFCs, which will improve the availability of credit in the market and reduce the liquidity crunch.

"I am positive that the steps taken by the RBI mandating the

India to host meeting of RCEP members on Sept 14-15; will protect industry interest: Goyal

ENSECONOMIC BUREAU
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

REPRESENTATIVES FROM countries negotiating the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) are expected to discuss measures to further strengthen the deal this week-end during a meeting called by the Indian government, said Commerce Minister Piyush Goyal on Wednesday.

With the deadline for India to sign the mega trade deal nearing, the minister told reporters here that the country would ensure that its domestic industry would be protected in keeping with national interest, but that national interest cannot be "hijacked" by one or two sectors.

Delegates from the 16 RCEP countries are expected to travel to New Delhi for further discussions on the mega trade deal on September 14 and 15, he said.

Goyal said that Prime Minister Narendra Modi directed him to conduct RCEP negotiations while "taking all steps" to protect the domestic industry. "At the same time, we have to keep in mind (bigger business opportunities) of new technology, foreign investment and opening up of the services sector ... otherwise, Indian exporters will be at a disadvantage," he said.

RCEP is a mega trade deal currently being negotiated between 16 countries, including the 10-member countries of the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN), China, Japan, South Korea, Australia New Zealand and India.

India currently has a trade deficit with several RCEP members. For instance, despite its free trade pact with ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) members, its deficit with Indonesia is around $10.6 billion, Thailand around $3 billion and Singapore around $4.7 billion.

While ASEAN members agreed to review their FTA in goods with India earlier this week, Goyal said that India has also "requested" RCEP countries like Japan and Korea to review their FTAs as well as it has been "many years" since these agreements were first signed and the trade situation between the countries have changed. India's trade deficit with Japan is around $7.9 billion and South

"We have requested those two countries to review these FTAs as soon as possible," he said. While concerns have been raised by several domestic industries on China's presence in the RCEP bloc, the minister said that the Indian industry was "literally vertically split" in its decision to join the deal.

India currently has $53.6 billion trade deficit with China, and segments of the country's domestic industry have in the past raised fears that agreeing to the mega trade deal would lead to cheaper Chinese products "flooding" the Indian market. However, not all industries have raised these issues, according to the minister.

"We have half the industry saying please bring RCEP, and we can increase exports dramatically. Then, there is a section of industry which feels that we should not have RCEP," he said.

The minister also said that he has given the patents office new targets to speed up approvals for patent and copyright applications by micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs) as well as startups. The government is expected to announce more concessions in these sectors for these approvals "soon", he added.

"I believe we will bring historical changes and speed in copyrights and patent approvals in the next 1-1.5 years," said Goyal.

SBI to sell up to 4.5% stake in life insurance firm

ENSECONOMIC BUREAU
MUMBAI, SEPTEMBER 11

THE BOARD of State Bank of India (SBI) on Wednesday approved the divestment of up to 4.5 per cent stake in SBI Life Insurance through an offer for sale (OFS) route.

The stake sale will fetch around Rs 3,595 crore at the current market price of SBI Life.

The executive committee of the central board (ECCB) of SBI in its meeting held today gave its nod to the stake sale decision, SBI said in a regulatory filing on Wednesday.

"SBI proposes to sell up to 3.50 crore equity shares, in aggregate representing 3.50 per cent of the total issued and paid-up equity share capital of SBI Life Insurance on September 12 (for non-retail investors only) and on September 13 (for retail investors and for non-retail investors who choose to carry forward their unallotted bids) with an option to additionally sell up to one crore equity shares (representing 1.00 per cent of the total issued and paid-up equity share capital of the company)," SBI Life said. In the event the oversubscription is exercised, the equity shares forming part of the base offer size and the oversubscription option will in aggregate be referred to as the "sale shares".

China exempts several US goods from retaliatory tariffs

BEIJING, SEPTEMBER 11

CHINA ANNOUNCED its first batch of tariff exemptions for 16 types of US products, days ahead of a planned meeting between trade negotiators from the two countries to try and de-escalate their bruising tariff war.

The exemptions will apply to US goods including some anticancer drugs and lubricants, as well as the animal feed ingredients whey and fish meal, the Ministry of Finance said in a statement on its website on Wednesday.

Beijing said in May that it would start a waiver programme, amid growing worries over the cost of the protracted trade war on its already slowing economy.

Some analysts view the move as a friendly gesture but don't see it as a signal that both sides are readying a deal.

China has imposed several rounds of duties on US goods in retaliation against US Section 301 tariffs, beginning last year in July and August with a 25 per cent levy on about $50 billion of US imports.

In all, the world's two largest economies have slapped tit-for-tat tariffs on hundreds of billions of dollars worth of goods in a bitter trade war.

Hong Kong exchange makes $39 bn unsolicited offer for LSE

London: Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing has made an unsolicited $39 billion takeover approach for the London Stock Exchange, a proposal contingent on the LSE ditching its acquisition of data company Refinitiv.

The move comes at a time of political turmoil in both Hong Kong and London. The LSE said it would review the proposal but added that it was committed to and continued to make good progress on its planned acquisition of Refinitiv from a consortium led by US private equity firm Blackstone. REUTERS

BILL PASSED IN A 29 TO 11 VOTE IN THE STATE SENATE AND WILL APPLY TO APP-BASED COMPANIES

California law to remake gig economy; firms like Uber, Lyft to treat contract workers as staff

KATE CONGER &

SACRAMENTO, SEPTEMBER 11

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATORS approved a landmark bill on Tuesday that requires companies like Uber and Lyft to treat contract workers as employees, a move that could reshape the gig economy and that adds fuel to a yearslong debate over whether the nature of work has become too insecure.

The bill passed in a 29 to 11 vote in the State Senate and will apply to app-based companies, despite their efforts to negotiate an exemption. California's governor, Gavin Newsom, endorsed the bill this month and is expected to sign it after it goes through the State Assembly, in what is expected to be a formality. Under the measure, which would go into effect January 1, workers must be designated as employees instead of contractors if a company exerts control over how they perform their tasks or if their work is part of a company's regular business.

The bill may influence other states. A coalition of labour groups is pushing similar legislation in New York, and bills in Washington State and Oregon that were similar to California's but failed to advance could see renewed momentum. New York City passed a minimum wage for ride-hailing drivers last year but did not try to classify them as employees.

In California, the legislation will affect at least one million workers who have been on the receiving end of a decades-long trend of outsourcing and franchising work, making employer-worker relationships more arm's-length. Many people have been pushed into contractor status with no access to basic protections like a minimum wage and unemployment insurance. Ride-hailing drivers, food-delivery couriers, janitors, nail salon workers, construction workers and franchise owners could now all be reclassified as employees.

But the bill's passage, which codifies and extends a 2018 California Supreme Court ruling, threatens gig economy companies

In India, slowdown may trigger demand of better incentives

New Delhi: In India, a slump in earnings for those involved in the "gig economy" — that includes driver-partners for cab-hailing firms like Uber and Ola, riders for food-delivery platforms, and other contractors across the unregulated consumer internet sector — could be a key factor for these workers to seek higher wages and better working hours.

"For cab companies, driver incentives has been a pending issue and the slowdown could trigger the demand from drivers to seek better incentives, particularly at a time when their earnings are falling due to reduced number of rides," said Satish Meena, senior forecast analyst at Forrester Research. According to market estimates, spending on driver incentives by cab companies, as a percentage of gross booking values, has come down from more than 50 per cent in early 2017 to nearly 20 per cent in 2019. ENS like Uber and Lyft. The ride-hailing firms — along with app-based services that offer food delivery, home repairs and dog-walking services — have built their businesses on inexpensive, independent labour. Uber and Lyft, which have hundreds of thousands of drivers in California, have said contract work provides people with flexibility. They have warned that recognising drivers as employees could destroy their businesses.

"It will have major reverberations around the country," said David Weil, a top US Labor Department official during the Obama administration and the author of a book on the so-called fissuring of the workplace. He argued that the bill could set a new bar for worker protections and force business owners to rethink their reliance on contractors.

California legislators said the bill, known as Assembly Bill 5 and proposed by State Assemblywoman Lorena Gonzalez, a Democrat, would set the tone for the future of work.

"Today the so-called gig companies present themselves as the innovative future of tomorrow, a future where companies don't pay Social Security or Medicare," said State Senator Maria Elena Durazo, a Democrat. "Let's be clear: there is nothing innovative about underpaying someone for their labour." She added, "Today we are determining the future of the California economy."

Ride-hailing drivers hailed the bill's passage. "I am so proud of rideshare drivers who took time out of their lives to share their stories, stand up, speak to legislators and hope they take a moment to bask in a victory," said Rebecca Stack-Martinez, a driver and an organizer with the group Gig Workers Rising. Uber did not immediately have a comment, while Lyft said it was disappointed. "Today, our state's political leadership missed an important opportunity to support the overwhelming majority of rideshare drivers who want a thoughtful solution that balances flexibility with an earnings standard and benefits," said Adrian Durbin, a Lyft spokesman. NYT

Trump seeks negative rates from US Fed

Washington: US President Donald Trump on Wednesday called on the “boneheads” at the Federal Reserve to push interest rates down into negative territory, a move reluctantly used by other world central banks to battle weak economic growth that risks punishing savers and banks’ earnings in the process. “The Federal Reserve should get our interest rates down to ZERO, or less ...,” Trump tweeted.

is introduced then it will generate new demand in the system which is good for auto sector. Even for real estate, I think some policy is ready to be rolled out by the government which has helped the markets.”

BSE Auto index on Wednesday ended the day at 16,665.83 points up by 565.52 points, while BSE Realty went up by 8742 points to end the day at 2049.87 points.

All the 16 stocks in BSE Auto index ended the day in green with Tata Motors and Eicher Motors gaining by 10.21 per cent and 4.98 per cent respectively.

While in BSE Realty index, nine out of ten stocks ended the day in gains. Oberoi Realty went up by 10.21 per cent followed by Godrej Properties, up 6.84 per cent on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the 30-share index settled 125.37 points, or 0.34 per cent, higher at 37,270.82. Similarly, the broader NSE Nifty rose 32.65 points, or 0.30 per cent, to finish at 11,035.70.

However, IT, teck, FMCG, oil and gas and utilities ended up to 1.29 per cent lower.

The broader BSE midcap and smallcap indices rallied up to 1.43 per cent. WITHFE&PTI

Global layoffs in Uber: ‘Some’ impact in India

ENSECONOMIC BUREAU
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

UBER, WHICH let go of about 435 employees across product and engineering teams globally, on Wednesday said “some jobs in India have been impacted”.

“India is a global engineering hub for Uber and we remain committed to significantly scaling up our teams in Hyderabad and Bengaluru to around 1,000 people. Uber CEO Dara Khosrowshahi will visit both engineering centres next month to meet employees and underscore our strategic investment in building the finest technology in India for the world,” an Uber India spokesperson said. The spokesperson, however, declined to comment as to how many jobs have been lost in the country. “...We’re making some changes to get us back on track ... These were incredibly difficult calls as it means some of our employees no longer have a role, specifically around 170 people in our product group and 265 in engineering, which is roughly 8 per cent of those two organisations,” Uber said in a statement. FE

Tatas to invest ₹300 cr in IIS

MUMBAI, SEPTEMBER 11

MINISTER FOR Skill Development and Entrepreneurship Mahendra Nath Pandey on Wednesday laid the foundation stone of Indian Institute of Skills (IIS) to provide skill training to students who want to pursue technical education after completing Class X and Class XII, making them employable. Tata Education Development Trust was selected as the private partner for setting up IIS at NSIT campus in Mumbai through a competitive bidding process. The Tata Group is investing about Rs 300 crore in the 4.5 acre campus. The aim of the institute is to ensure 5,000 trainees pass out every year with 70 per cent placement opportunities.

Fibre crop or oilseed?

A bumper harvest awaits cotton growers even as low export demand for lint and yarn dampens price prospects

GOPAL KATESHIYA
AMRELI (GUJARAT), SEPTEMBER 11

LEISURELY SURVEYING his cotton field, Gabhru Der wears a smile as the pink and whitish-yellow flowers of the crop sway gently in the morning breeze. Though a couple of hours have elapsed after sunrise, some gloom still lurks from the heavily overcast skies.

"It has rained very well and my crop looks good. At this stage, I can expect a bumper harvest," says the 42-year-old, whose village Hathigadh in Amreli district's Babra taluka is on the banks of Gagadiya. Check dams across this river — a tributary of the west-flowing Shetrunji that is the largest in Gujarat's Saurashtra region — are almost filled to capacity.

Der owns 50 bigha (8 hectares), on which he has sown cotton in 40, groundnut in seven, and fodder in the rest three for his two buffaloes and bullock pair. There's enough water in the 650-feet deep tube-well and an open well on his farm for providing irrigation till early winter. "It should suffice to harvest at least four quintals of kapas (raw unginned cotton) per bigha," states this farmer who has studied till Class VII.

Till a decade ago, Der grew groundnut on the larger part of his holding. Now, he finds cotton to be far more profitable, though his average kapas yield last year was just 1.75 quintals per bigha. The average rate for his whole 70 quintals crop was Rs 5,350 per quintal, a shade below the government's minimum support price (MSP) of Rs 5,450 for long-staple varieties/hybrids.

Der's only worry at the moment is the pink bollworm. The larvae of this insect pest can potentially cause damage to his cotton that was sown in early-July and is currently in early boll formation stage. "If there is no infestation in the next 25 days, or I can control it with pesticides, my yields may even turn out better than the average four quintals," he adds.

Der's crop would be ready for its first picking after mid-October. Subsequent pickings take place at 2-3 week intervals. In a good season, such as this one so far, four pickings are assured. If the farmer is lucky, which is a function of water availability in wells, there could be a fifth picking as well.

Der is also confident about prices. "A 50-kg bag of kapasiya khol (cottonseed oil cake) is costing Rs 1,700 these days and I have myself paid that for feeding my buffaloes. At this rate, I should probably get Rs 100,000/quintal for my kapas," he quips.

His bullishness is shared by Bansibhai Khankhal, who, together with his four brothers, farms 30 bigha on the outskirts of Amreli town. They have been cultivating cotton on their entire holding for the last 10 years. With access to irrigation from two tube-wells and two open wells, their yields have averaged six quintals per bigha.

"We harvested this even last year, only due to having sufficient water. Cotton gives good returns unlike groundnut, which is also vulnerable to raids by jangali bhund (wild boar). At six quintals, my revenue from kapas, even at Rs 5,000/quintal, is Rs 30,000 per bigha, whereas the total input cost comes to Rs 10,000. And this time, given how kapasiya khol prices are ruling, I am sure even kapas rates will be higher," notes Khankhal, who is equally happy at pink bollworm not creating any problems as yet.

Amreli has received 30% above-average rains during this southwest monsoon season from June 1. The other 10 districts (Bhavnagar, Botad, Surendranagar, Morbi, Rajkot, Junagadh, Gir Somnath, Porbandar and Devbhoomi Dwarka) of Saurashtra have also registered surplus rainfall. As on September 5, farmers in Gujarat had planted 26.645 lakh hectares (1h) under cotton, slightly lower than last year's coverage of 26.908 lh. But according to the state agriculture department's officials, the final acreage figure may go up as more reports from districts come in. Moreover, the crop looks much better compared to last year.

Gujarat is India's largest cotton producer, accounting for about 28% of its total lint output. Within Gujarat, more than 70% production comes from Saurashtra, with farmers in Amreli — which has emerged as the state's largest cotton district — alone planting the

However, cotton ginner and millers aren't as optimistic. The main reason for it is low lint prices from a collapse of export markets, both for raw (ginned and pressed) cotton and spun yarn. Raw cotton exports from India were valued at Rs 1,205.94 crore during April-July 2019, as against Rs 5,474.15 core for the same period last year. Cotton yarn shipments were similarly down, from Rs 9,407.15 crore to Rs 6,115.30 crore.

"The US-China trade war has taken a toll on exports, with China, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Vietnam, Indonesia and others not buying as before. Also, since our exporters are quoting around Rs 42,500 per candy (355.62 kg of lint), these countries are increasingly sourcing from the US or Africa, where it is available for Rs 40,000 or less," points out Arvind Patel, vice-president of the Rajkot-based Saurashtra Ginners Association. He expects market prices for the new 2019-20 kapas crop to be in the Rs 4,750-5,000 per quintal range, below the MSP of Rs 5,550 declared by the Narendra Modi government. In the last season, kapas traded at an average of Rs 5,604 per quintal in Amreli's agricultural produce market committee mandi.

The interesting trend this time is that while lint prices are under pressure, courtesy poor demand from exporters and textile mills, cottonseed oilcake rates have skyrocketed to record Rs 1,700-1,800 per 50 kg-bag levels. "I don't think these prices are sustainable. They shot up because of a bad crop (India's cotton production fell to an estimated 312 lakh bales in 2018-19, from the previous year's 365 lakh bales) and should come down to around Rs 1,000 per bag once farmers bring their new produce from late-October," feels Bhupat Metaliya, the owner of a cotton ginning, spinning and oil mill in Amreli.

One quintal (100 kg) of kapas contains roughly 34 kg lint (the white fibre that is either exported or spun into yarn by mills), 65 kg seed and one kg moisture. Ginners basically separate lint from the seeds that is sold separately to oil mills. 100 kg of cottonseed typically yields 12 kg of washed oil (which reduces to 10 kg on refining), 85 kg of cake (which also contains about 7% oil) and balance moisture or waste. At prevailing rates of Rs 42,500/candy for lint, Rs 1,300 per 15-kg tin for refined cottonseed oil and Rs 1,700/bag for cake, the gross realisation from one quintal of kapas would work out to Rs 6,505 (4063+563+1879). Seed, in other words, generates 37.5% of the revenues today from primary kapas processing.

However, Sameer Shah, president of the Saurashtra Oil Mill Association at Jamnagar, does not see cotton becoming more of an oilseed than a fibre crop. "Cottonseed oil has, no doubt, replaced groundnut as the main cooking medium in Gujarat. But its consumption outside the state is practically zero. And with large-scale import of cheap palm oil, it is no longer used to make vanaspati ghee (hydrogenated vegetable oil) either. Kapas can ultimately sustain only as a natural fibre source," he contends.

SAY MITHAI, NOT CHEESE

Exploring the next Milky Way to growth

Indian dairies should go in for industrial-scale production of traditional milk products for selling in both domestic and export markets

TARUN SHRIDHAR & SHARAD GUPTA

MILLIONS OF stars, each not big enough to count individually, define our galaxy, aptly named the Milky Way. The half-litre poly pack of milk that millions in India open every day is, similarly, the output of innumerable dairy farmers and their bovines. The unique system of some 47.5 million litres of daily milk collection from over 16 million producers for processing and sale by our dairy cooperatives — which even some private dairies have gone on to adopt — is a Milky Way that India has successfully demonstrated to the world. It has also enabled the country become the world's largest milk producer at 176.3 million tonnes in 2017-18 and a per capita availability of 375 grams per day, three time more than what it was till the late 1970s.

Against this backdrop, it is surprising to see the Indian dairy industry today seeking more to guard its elevated status than aiming for the stars. What stops it from becoming the global leader in dairy product markets? Why should Amul, a national pride and respected global brand, express insecurity in the face of imagined competition? It is true that the European Union and the US convert their milk surpluses into mounds of powder and butter oil, creating distortions in global trade and artificially depressing prices. Also, huge quantities are dumped under the garb of humanitarian aid. In a scenario where global markets are manipulated and the countries responsible follow protectionist policies back home, a direct exposure of our farmers to international competition can be both risky and unfair.

But India should consider itself lucky not being a "price taker" like New Zealand, which has only the export market and where it is at the mercy of "price-makers", viz. the US and EU. The sheer size of our domestic market — which will only increase with rising incomes and high elasticity of demand for milk and milk products — should ensure that we aren't relegated to being a "price-taker". There is no likelihood, nor should the government contemplate, of allowing easy/concessional tariff access to foreign dairy products under the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership or any other bilateral or multi-lateral agreement.

However, that should not make the Indian dairy industry complacent. It should, indeed, look at capturing global markets, rather than being concerned about the mere possibility of others' dairy products entering our markets.

To start with, the focus should shift from quantity to quality. It is a fact that we cannot now boast of excellence in quality of our products: One could call it unfair, but they do not meet the sanitary and phytosanitary standards required for exporting to developed markets. Secondly, just as Italy gave the world pizzas, why cannot we offer something that is different and new? The launch pad for navigating the next Milky Way, in fact, actually exists within the country — in the form of traditional dairy products.

Dairy India had, in 2015, estimated the Indian market for milk and dairy products — in terms of the value paid by consumers — at Rs 5,26,403.6 crore or $81 billion. The biggest component of it was liquid milk, at Rs 3,03,983.6 crore or 58%. The second largest segment, at Rs 81,000 crore, was desiccated/coagulated products such as khoa, chhanna and paneer that are used as base material for a variety of indigenous sweets and preparations. This was followed by other products (mostly comprising traditional sweets, at Rs 72,000 crore), followed by ghee (Rs 40,200 crore) and curd/ yoghurt/ lassi/chhach (Rs 12,420 crore). On the other hand, the value of milk powders (Rs 13,000 crore), table butter (Rs 2,450 crore) and cheese/edible casein (Rs 1,350 crore) was way below that of indigenous products.

Organised dairies have, no doubt, made considerable inroads into liquid milk marketing. Almost a third of the milk Indian consumers currently purchase is in branded pouches; that will only increase with the neighbourhood dudhia fading into oblivion. Dairies have also grabbed a significant share of the market — to the extent these are not made at home — for curd and ghee. But they have left the most profitable segment of indigenous milk sweets and preparations to the unorganised sector, which thrives on low capital base, generally disregards food standards and cares little for good manufacturing practices.

The major strength of traditional dairy products lies in their mass appeal. The market as well as operating margins for these far exceeds that of butter, cheese, powder, whiteners and other western dairy products. Their industrial-scale production presents a unique opportunity to organised dairies. In this age of globalisation, projecting ethnic foods and culture beyond their narrow regional confines makes good business strategy. There is enormous scope to influence even overseas consumer behaviour through exotic product offerings.

The Indian dairy industry can increasingly explore the use of modern processing techniques for producing traditional milk products — whether continuous khoa-making machines or homogenisation to improve their texture. Candy-processing equipment could, likewise, work well for making burfis and pedas, just as tofu manufacturing lines simulating production of paneer. Even imported food processing machinery, with some modifications, can be used to produce gulabjamun and rasgulla. Lassi, it is known, is good for digestion and also induces sleep, which has to do with an amino acid called tryptophan that is converted in the body to serotonin, given as medication for insomnia. In a world full of tensions, anything that can help one to sleep and makes for a great night-cap drink is a blessing. What we need are smart marketing gurus to sell these sweet dreams globally.

Horlicks made a great business of putting over two-third of malt solids in milk and selling it at the same price as milk solids. Our halwais have done better. They add 30-40% sugar to khoa and channa that already contain 30-50% water and sell these at prices higher than milk solids. No wonder, they make more money than any organised dairy. Globally, the value added to milk through product manufacture and marketing is at least twice the price paid to the dairy farmer. This applies even more in the case of halwais. While western dairy products (with the exception of malted milk and chocolates) add about 50% value to milk, the traditional Indian dairy products add 200%.

The message is loud and clear: The fusion of technological processes and products, blending the best of ethnic and modern foods, and a cross-cultural approach to product development is the way forward. The possibilities for them are endless in the wake of expanding globalisation. Our dairies should view the world as their marketplace and turn to ethnic foods for even creating a new class of products with exotic appeal. How about a gulabjamun soufflé or a kulfi mousse for dessert?

DAY TODAY

BY PETER VIDAL

ARIES (Mar 21 - Apr 20)

The overall picture suggests that this is a busy day, if an expensive one. However, there doesn't seem to be any real obligation on you towards anything which can't be left to others. This should suit those of you who either need a rest or are arranging delicate personal matters.

TAURUS (Apr 21 - May 21)

Other people now appear to have the right approach, but your general situation is aided by the fact that you are also instinctively more tolerant and ready to accept different points of view. In part this is because you are now more secure emotionally.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)

It's a nervous moment, and people around you may be jumping to conclusions for no good reason. Everyone concerned seems to be too ready to take offence, but have you considered that it might be too easy for you to make a mistake? If you fire on all cylinders you may inadvertently say the wrong thing.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)

You've not always been a good judge of character, partly because you always wanted to believe the best, and also because you tend to jump to instant conclusions. You deserve admiration for your trusting qualities, but perhaps you are finally seeing others as they really are.

LEO (July 24 - Aug 23)

You have survived one emotional challenge, although there may well be ripples for some time yet. You should rein in your horns if you've overstretched yourself in any personal matter, and conserve your resources. This is a reckless moment, but you can let other people take the risks, especially if there are likely to be hidden costs.

VIRGO (Aug 24 - Sep 23)

All eyes will be on you. The planets aligned with public and professional sectors of your horoscope are still very strong, but in view of the generally emotional overtones of today's lunar impact, I would expect close relations and intimate friends to be urging you on.

LIBRA (Sep 24 - Oct 23)

SCORPIO (Oct 24 - Nov 23)

You tend to blow hot and cold in emotional relationships, enthusing one minute, retreating behind your shell the next. If you start behaving like this now, take care, otherwise someone may give you a dose of your own medicine next week. But if you can dish it out, you should be ready to take it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 24 - Dec 22)

You're walking a tight rope, willing to take risks, but not prepared to lose. Worldly ambitions, including professional aspirations, loom large. If you wish to make the most of your undoubted assets, proceed intuitively and, if you're responsible for other people, show them your care.

CAPRICORN (Dec 23 - Jan 20)

There have been so many frustrations and delays, but only because you expect so much. You may now begin to let up at work and place more emphasis on relaxation and pleasure. Also, secure firm agreement from close relations, particularly children.

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 - Feb 19)

At the moment, personal money matters and joint financial arrangements are both high on the agenda. The signs are that you'll be in an emotional mood and not too happy with people who take you for granted. That doesn't mean, though, that you should waste your own money dealing with them.

PISCES (Feb 20 - Mar 20)

One particularly encouraging aspect indicates that you'll be able to revive a special partnership. A little effort will be required. It may be a simple question of getting in touch. Perhaps an explanation is called for, partly because other people are impatient to get to the truth.

Changing with the Times

STREAMING PLATFORM Netflix has partnered with filmmaker Karan Johar's digital arm Dharmatic Entertainment for a multi-year deal in content creation. This will entail Dharmatic to create fiction and non fiction series and films aimed for its exclusive viewers. Johar, who had joined hands with Netflix for Lust Stories in 2018 and is currently directing Ghost Stories for the platform, said in a statement, "There is one aspect, which is very daunting in all our existence — the pressure of the Friday box-office performance and then the general performance of your film, which looms large on us filmmakers. But when you have a platform where you can showcase your creativity and your content and don't have the pressure of the box office, you are given wings to fly."

Robert Frank Passes Away

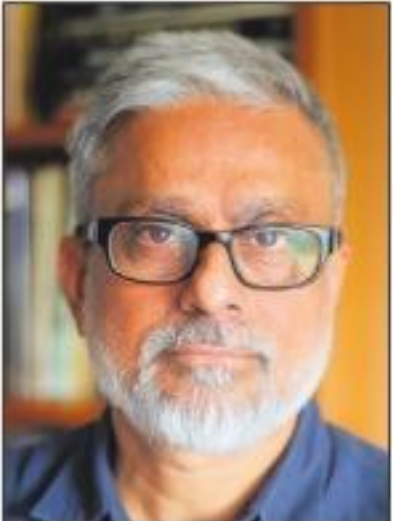

PHOTOGRAPHER ROBERT Frank, who revolutionised documentary photography, has died at the age of 94 in Cape Breton Island. The Swiss-American photographer was best-known for his revolutionary book The Americans which challenged conventional art forms, as he delved into themes of loneliness and isolation. One of the finest examples of his master works, it captured images from everyday American life, ranging from teenagers in love and bikers to the lives of factory workers, to present subjects that were simple. In the '60s and '70s, Frank had attained the status of being an antidote to the traditional culture when emerging as an avant-garde filmmaker. The ground-breaking photographer, is survived by his wife, June Leaf.

In his latest docu-series, wildlife filmmaker Krishnendu Bose tells the stories of forest guards who man India's forests, even though their work remains largely unrecognised

SURBHI GUPTA

WHEN KRISHNENDU Bose was at Pakke Tiger Reserve in Arunachal Pradesh, shooting with his crew in a gorge, a baby elephant slipped and fell off the cliff. It was terrified, struggling to get out, when a group of forest guards came forward and rescued it. They also spotted its mother, standing on the top of the hill, looking equally terrified. Bose also talks about how Khenrab Phuntsog, a forest guard in Ladakh's Hemis National Park, suffered a heart attack, due to extreme weather conditions in the terrain. He also mentions a special squad that works round-the-clock in north Bengal's elephant corridors to keep the jumbos off the farms.

The Delhi-based wildlife filmmaker, in his new docu-series Heroes of the Wild Frontiers, has given a face to hundreds of these forest guards and frontline staff, who man India's forests and national parks. "Anyone working in the forests only gets to see animals, trees and forest guards; they are the only humans one sees in the wild. My learning curve, as a filmmaker and conservationist who understands little about ecology and behaviour though, a lot of it has been due to them. Their expertise has helped my craft a lot, especially when you've to place your boots on the ground, and ears and nose in the air. I have been thoroughly inspired by these guys," says Bose, who has been making films on wildlife for the last 25 years. His 2007 film Tiger – The Death Chronicles had won the conservation award at International Wildlife Festival in Montana USA, while The Tiger

Who Crossed the Line (2016) won the National Award in 2017.

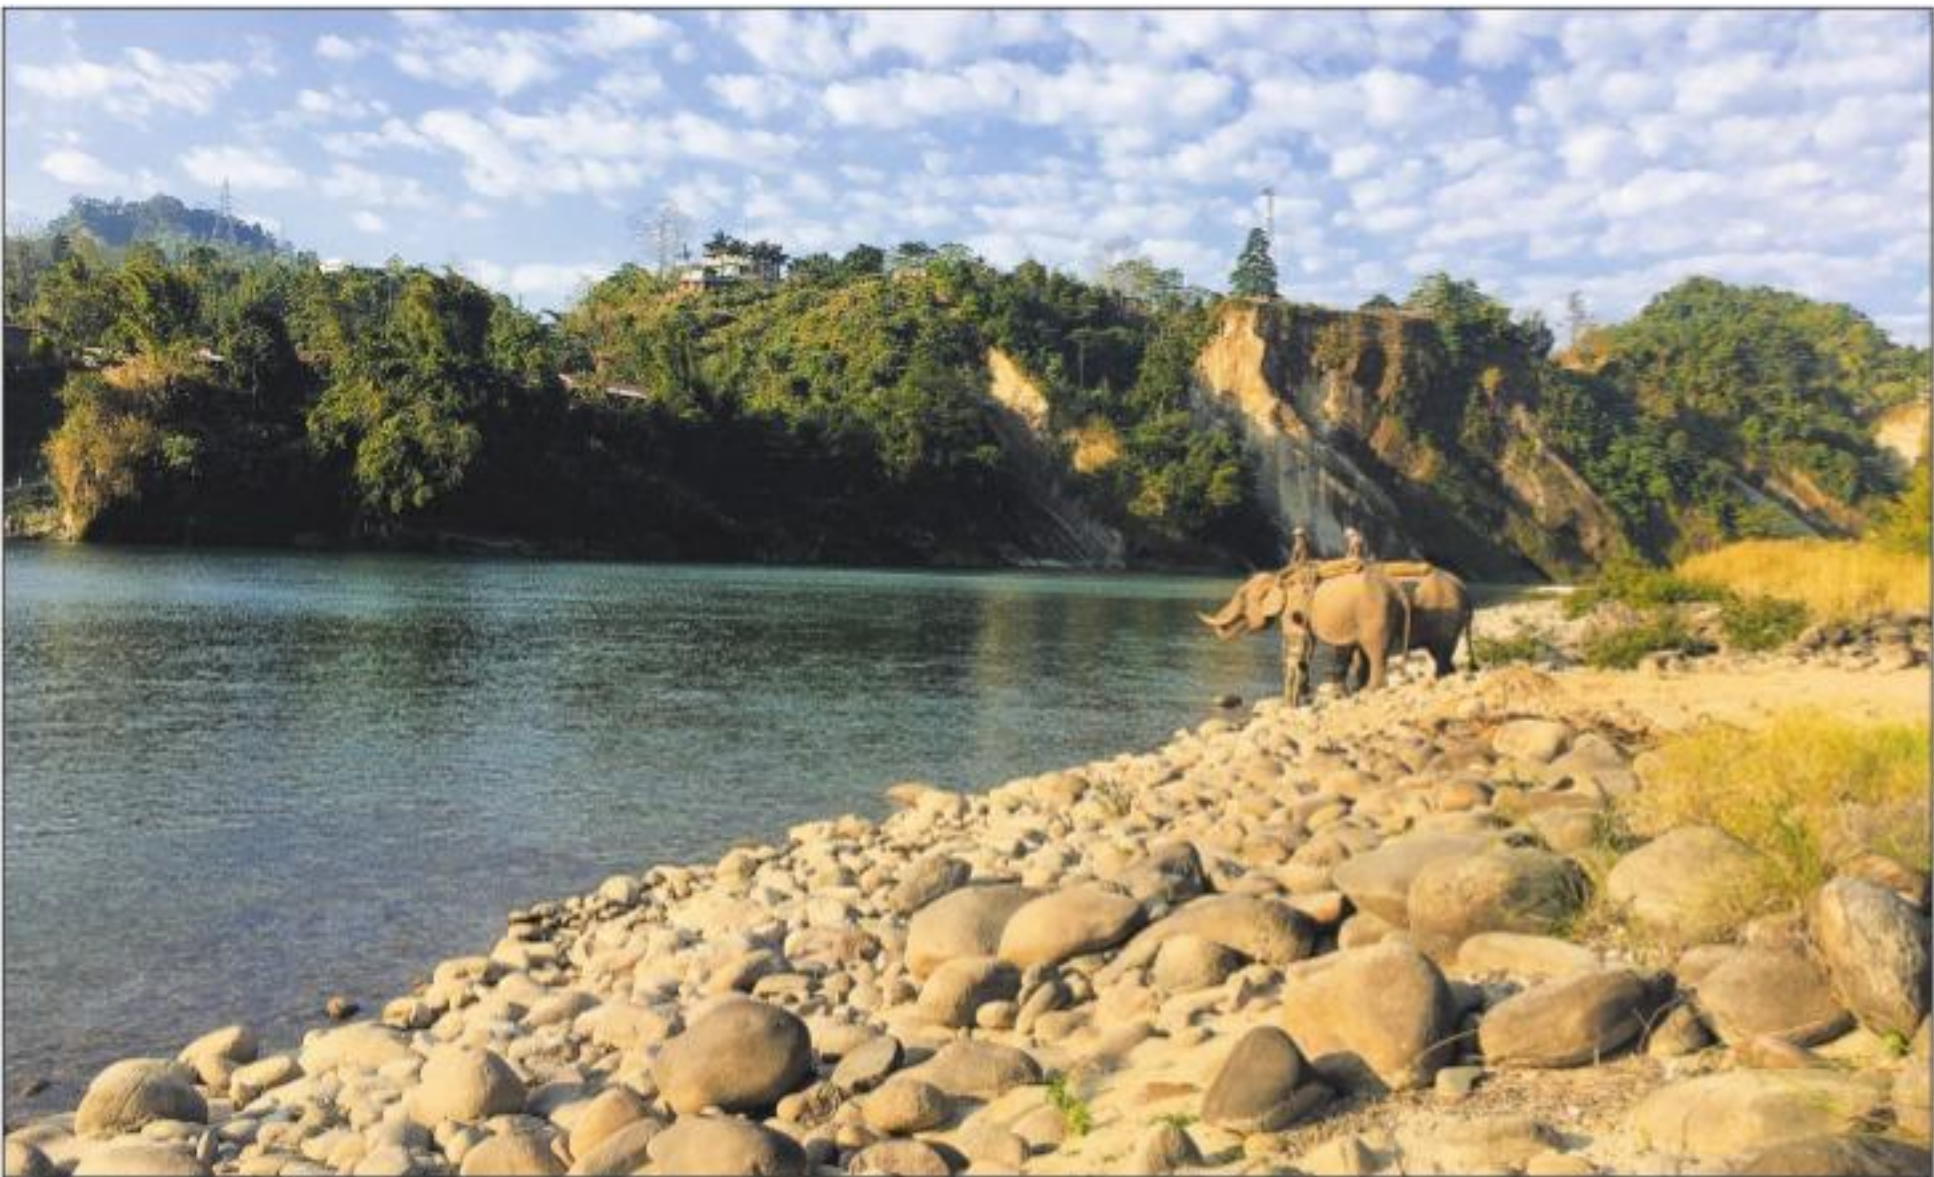

Heroes of the Wild Frontiers, which will premiere on Animal Planet September 16 onwards, starts at the Mahatma Gandhi Marine National Park in the Andaman islands, where one gets to see the breeding season of the Leatherback Sea Turtles and the bleaching of corals; and moves to the northern mountains in Hemis National Park to spot the snow leopards; and then to the Sunderban mangroves in West Bengal where the man-eating Royal Bengal Tiger resides. In each episode, we meet a forest guard to get a sense of his daily life and routine. "They have so much of knowledge and experience, but are always on the edge. And what do they get for it — pittance for a salary, undefined working hours, with their families being so far. A lot of credit goes to the top bureaucracy, policymakers and the government but the real men on ground are not talked about much. The last-mile connectivity to conservation in this country is through these guys," he says. The series that was in the making for a year has been funded by a host of organisations — including World Wildlife Fund, Wildlife Trust of India and Wildlife Conservation Trust, among others.

"If you have three services who are entrusted with protection on the frontline — army, police and forest guards — you have to see who gets what. Forest guards are way poorer cousins with no medical facilities or rotation system. It was very difficult for us to get four-five days with them to shoot this series; if they got a message on the wireless, they had to rush," says Bose.

As one watches the series, one notices how it is the forest guard who acts as the wall during a man-animal conflict. "We saw how there were villagers pushing away the elephants and also the forest guards but while the former are trying to save their lives and property, the latter are trying to save the elephants, and in the process, saving people," says Bose. In the episode on Hemis, we learn about the snow leopard tourism project initiated by the forest department, where they have involved local communities.

A solution to man-animal conflict is very difficult, he says. "India is a developing economy and also a conservation success story. But there is a flipside: if there are more tigers today and they are slipping out of protected areas as more forests are being cut, the conflict is only going to increase. People have to learn how to co-exist with wildlife," says Bose, who hopes to add a second season to the series.

MAMI 21st Mumbai Film Festival announces films that make it to the India Gold competition section

ALAKA SAHANI

AS INDIAN filmmakers push the boundary and come up with engaging stories, the Jio MAMI 21st Mumbai Film Festival with Star cherrypicks 10 movies that celebrate India's cultural diversity and highlight its contemporary concerns, for its 'India Gold' section. The competition section showcases animator Gitanjali Rao's debut feature Bombay Rose, which explores the ruthlessness of a society where the love and life that reign on the big screen can crush a commoner in its mean streets. It also features Gurvinder Singh's Bitter Chestnut (Khanaur) that looks into the issues of migration and reverse migration. While in Just Like That (Aise Hi) by Kislay, a widow must face the consequences of making her own choice by going against the societal expectations, Pushpendra Singh's Pearl of the Desert (Maru ro Moti) highlights class conflicts through the aspirations of a Manganiyar musician.

The festival will showcase Marathi, Pahari, Maithili, Assamese, Nepali, Hindustani, and Bengali movies under this section. This year also marks the return of MAMI veterans. Bhaskar Hazarika, whose film The River of Fables (Kothanodi) was screened at the festival in 2015, is back with Ravening (Aamis). So is Singh whose National Award-winning Chauthi Koot was screened at the festival. Archana Atul Phadke's Marathi documentary, About Love, will premiere along with Prateek Vats' Eeb Allay Ooo!. His A Very Old Man With Enormous Wings had premiered at Jio MAMI Mumbai Film Festival with Star, 2017.

Speaking about the line-up, Smriti Kiran, artistic director, MAMI, said: "India Gold is at the heart of our selection. We are an international film festival but bringing the best Indian narratives to the world and to India is at the core of our mission." The film festival, which opens on October 17 with Mothoon by Geetu Mohandas, goes on till October 24.

This Is Not A Movie. Or is it?

can bring him alive again.

In a world awash with hardcore porn, a film which deals with BDSM and so-called aberrative sexual appetites, runs the risk of tawdriness. But Dogs Don't Wear Pants is more interested in using pain and humiliation as a means to explore the innards of the human psyche: what does it take a man to shut down so completely that he forgets to feel, and what is it that will help him turn the corner?

There is plenty here to make the faint-hearted or the squeamish extremely uncomfortable, especially a little set-piece involving a sharp object and a tooth, as well as a dog's collar. But for those who persevere, the film reveals its hand slowly but surely, and shows just how two individuals can come together even in the most challenging circumstances. And leaves you wondering: are those who cause pain hurting themselves? And does pain really purify and heal?

Veteran Hong Kong filmmaker Yonfan's animation feature No 7 Cherry Lane, which won much applause at the just concluded Venice film festival before fetching up at TIFF, is so stunning to look at that you can spend hours drinking it in. Each frame is a thing of beauty, whether it is the interiors of a house where a handsome young fellow begins tutoring a pretty girl (they read Jane Eyre together; he is a Proust fan), whose mother is a beautiful, sensuous older woman and exerts a powerful hold on the young man.

Other characters float in and out of this ensemble, men, women and animals, all engaged in, at one level, day-to-day living, and on another, making strong political, psychosexual comments about the times they are going through. The film is set in 1967, and is drenched in nostalgia. The looking-back at an era gone by, by a 72-year-old filmmaker carries special weight, and though No 7 Cherry Lane is often a bit all over the place, there is no doubt that we are in the presence of a major filmmaker, giving us the sights and sounds — lush, drenched in desire, and a couple of blow-your-socks-off-sequences-of-carnal-pleasure — which are stayers.

How do foreign correspondents, the ones who sign up for the wandering life — of mendicant, observer, reporter all rolled into one — see themselves? And equally importantly, how do others, especially in a media environment with shrinking resources, do the same thing?

The National Film Board of Canada's documentary slate at TIFF is topped by This Is Not A Movie by Yung Chang, in which the British-born Robert Fisk, who reported for The Times, London, and then moved on to The Independent is shown talking about his life and times. And what a life — more than 40 years spent on the frontlines of some of the most troubled spots in the world, from Northern Ireland to the Middle-East and Syria.

The film opens with Fisk walking down a rubble-strewn town in Syria, and it cuts back and forth in time, swooping back to when he was a young, upcoming reporter telling the stately The Times what was what, and then later, keeps him company as he is shown struggling to make sense of a world gone to hell in a handbasket, and moved to the intangible-yet-permanent internet.

It's not just journalists, especially print warhorses, who will enjoy this account, but also the others who have no idea what it takes to be a newsperson who has dedicated his or her life to the reporting of truth as they see it, and the courage and conviction it takes to tell those stories that no one wants to hear. Conflict goes on forever, doesn't it?

And now, I'm tearing off to join the long lines for Taika Waititi's much-anticipated Jojo Rabbit. Have a good feeling about it, and as I'm doing so, I'm thinking of John Updike's classic novel, Run Rabbit Run. That's who we are, us film critics on foreign shores, always on the run.

SHINY VARGHESE

EVERYBODY KNEW Vasant Kamath to be the gentleman architect, soft spoken and calm, and his designs embodied that care he gave to detailing his buildings. With nearly half a century of architectural practice and over three decades of teaching architecture at the School of Planning and Architecture (SPA), Delhi, Vasant gave the profession the quiet confidence that those who dared, could stick it out and make a difference. He passed away in Delhi on September 3, after a long battle with cancer. He was 73.

"Vasant taught generations of students," says architect-urban designer KT Ravindran, "He had such a depth and breadth of knowledge that he could guide students in their various fields of interest. He was also public minded, and was at the forefront of different projects, even if it didn't benefit him."

His practice with architect-wife Revathi — Kamath Design Studio in Delhi — grew world renowned for their use of locally available materials and sensitivity to crafts and local skills. Be it their own mud house in Faridabad, where they turned a dis-used quarry site into an ecosystem for grasslands and seasonal plants, or an early '80s project in Seemapuri for the NGO Mobile Creches, where they explored the properties of brick to create arches and domes.

"He found what was traditional and inserted it into his modern buildings, mainstreamed the vernacular and gave mud buildings a brand value. For his six-foot-tall personality, he had a way of designing small spaces, like he did in Mobile Creches, where every detail is thought through, be it the way the light falls or a nook takes shape. He left the expansive outside and consumed as much of it, making use of every corner in an 8ft x 8ft room," says architect Manoj Mathur, former head, Architecture Department, SPA, Delhi.

A memorial meeting for Vasant will be held at the India Islamic Centre, Delhi, on September 15 at 3 pm.

SHUBHRA GUPTA

AND JUST like that, six days are over, and it is my last day at TIFF. The head is abuzz, everything is a blur, and I'm doing my usual ritual of stacking up the stand-outs, the ones that didn't work all the way were rewarding nevertheless, and the ones that make everything worthwhile — the crazy travel, non-stop screening schedules, and stuffing one's face with dense carbs.

It is a truism that film critics on the festival circuit do live by bread alone. And movies. The Finnish film, Dogs Don't Wear Pants by Jukka-Pekka Valkeappa has to be one of the most unusual love stories I've seen in a while. A well-regarded cardiac surgeon (Pekka Strang) who has lost his wife under mysterious circumstances, has sunk into a deep, dark space, and nothing, not even his teenage daughter's petulant transgressions, can rouse him.

Quite by accident, as he accompanies his rebellious teen to a tattoo parlour, he ends up in the company of a dominatrix (Krista Kosonen). She thinks he is a client, and before he can demur, she throws the entire kitchen-sink at him — whips, chains, leather, metal, and he discovers something about himself: pain

BRIEFLY

Squad for SA Tests to be picked today

New Delhi: Opener KL Rahul's poor show with the bat may pave the way for Rohit Sharma's return to the Indian Test set-up when the selectors meet here on Thursday to decide the squad for the two-match series against South Africa next month. Rohit, who could-n't make the cut in the playing XI against the West Indies, is expected to be tried out as an opener after Hanuma Vihari and Ajinkya Rahane sealed slot Nos 5 and 6 in the batting order respectively. Rohit's last Test appearance for India was in the away series against Australia in 2018. Cheteshwar Pujara, at No.3, and skipper Virat Kohli, at No.4, automatically pick themselves. The other openers in fray are Priyank Panchal of Gujarat and Shubman Gill of Punjab. Rahul has scored 664 runs in his last 30 Test innings, with his only notable score -- 149 against England at the Oval last year --, coming in a dead fifth rubber. The first Test will be begin in Visakhapatnam on October 2.

Pant aiming for fresh start vs Proteas

Kolkata: Indian wicketkeeper-batsman Rishabh Pant on Wednesday said he is eyeing a fresh start with the upcoming T20 and Test series against South Africa after drawing criticism for a below-par show in the tour of West Indies last month. "I have practiced hard for the South Africa series, and I am going in the series with a positive mindset. I will try my best to get a good start," said Pant. The Delhi youngster was criticised for not making his chances count in the limited-overs and Test tour of the West Indies. "It went great for our team. It's great to return on a clean slate. But once a team returns, the last series is past. of course it's our home series and there will be advantage for us but the most important thing is to start well."

India A close in on big win despite weather

Thiruvananthapuram: India A edged closer to a resounding victory over South Africa A in the first unofficial Test despite a rain-hit day three in which only 20 overs could be bowled. India captured four wickets to reduce South Africa A to 179 for 9, who go into day four with a paltry lead of 40 runs in the second innings. Majority of overs were lost at the Greenfield stadium due to overnight rain and a wet outfield. India A had made 303 in reply to SA A's first innings score of 164. The hosts made most of the play possible as spinners Shahbaz Nadeem (3 for 17) and Jalaj Saxena (2 for 22) came to the party. The overnight batsmen Heinrich Klaasen (35 batting) and Wiaan Mulder (12 batting) went on the attack and SA A managed to overturn the deficit. BRIEF SCORES: South Africa A 164 all out in 51.5 overs and 179 for 9 in 55 overs (Zubayr Hamza 44, Heinrich Klaasen 48; Wiaan Mulder 46, S Nadeem 3/17, Jalaj Saxena 2/22) vs India A 303 all out in 87.5 overs (Shubman Gill 90, Lungi Ngidi 3/50).

'Don't give a toss about criticism'

London: Former England opener Geoffrey Boycott has said he doesn't "give a toss" about the criticism his knighthood has generated. Boycott was severely criticised by UK's senior female MP Harriet Harman, who asked for a review of the "baffling decision to honour a man who was convicted in a French court in 1998 for assaulting his then-girlfriend, Margaret Moore". "It was 25 years ago. You can take your political nature and do whatever you want with it. You want to talk to me about my knighthood, it's very nice of you to have me, but I couldn't give a toss," he said.

A SHADOW OVER A GLORIOUS SUMMER

England's unforgettable home season began three months ago at The Oval with a victory over South Africa in the World Cup opener. The victorious World Cup campaign gave way to the Ashes disappointment, but the home team will look to sign off on a high when they take on the Aussies in the final Test of the series beginning here on Thursday. Reuters

At Oval, England look to square series

While Aussies have retained the urn, there are still 24 Test Championship points up for grabs in final Test

REUTERS
LONDON, SEPTEMBER 11

ENGLAND HAVE dropped batsman Jason Roy for the fifth and final Test against Australia starting at The Oval on Thursday as they try to level the series after failing to claim the Ashes.

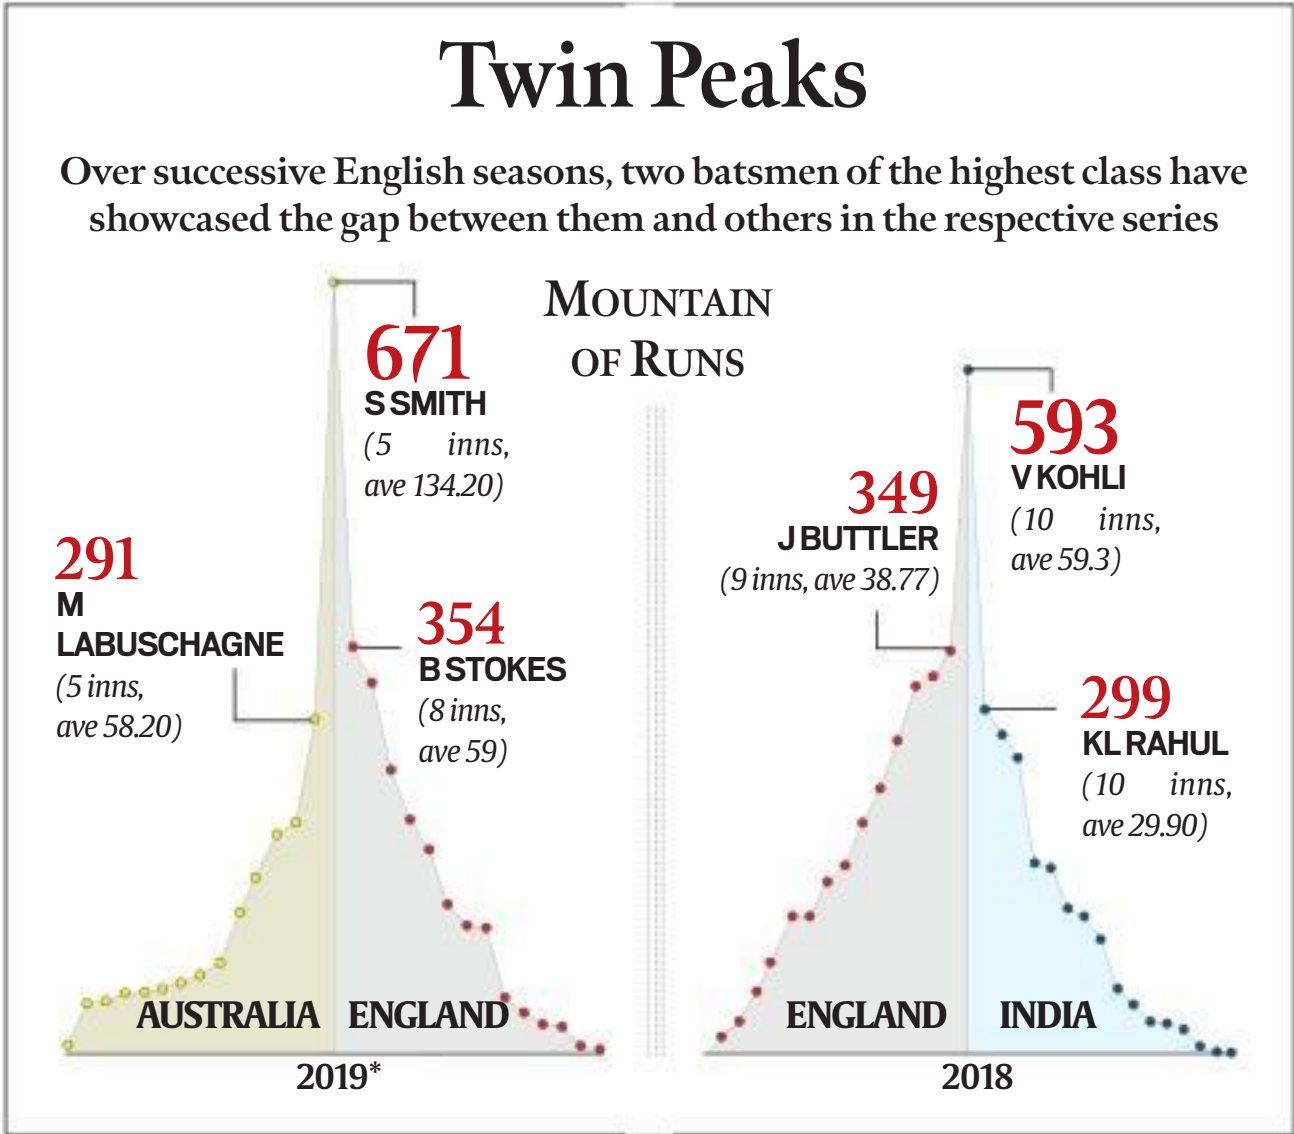

The out-of-form Roy is one of two changes to the side that lost the fourth test at Old Trafford on Sunday by 185 runs, with bowler Craig Overton also missing out. They are replaced by all rounder Sam Curran and Chris Woakes. Ben Stokes will play as a batsman only after injuring his shoulder at Old Trafford.

Australia, who retained the Ashes by taking a 2-1 series lead in Manchester, make one change with all-rounder Mitchell Marsh coming in to bolster the bowling attack. He replaces Travis Head. Roy's omission is no great surprise as he has struggled throughout the series having made his Test debut in the warm-up match against Ireland.

The one-day specialist was the latest attempt to solve England's opening woes but the gamble has not paid off and he has managed only 110 runs in eight innings with a top score of 31 at Old Trafford when he dropped down the order. England are trying to avoid a home series defeat by Australia for the first time since 2001.

"It has not quite gone the way he would have liked but I'm sure he will go away and work hard and come back again. I'm sure he'll have that attitude and try and prove a point," England captain Joe Root told a news conference on Wednesday. Root's captaincy, and his form, has come under the spotlight but he sounded an upbeat tone as he looked forward to trying to level the series.

"There is plenty to play for and the guys are determined to make sure we finish the season 2-2," he said. "We have not lost anything yet. Of course, we are disappointed not to win the Ashes back but we are fully focused to finish the series 2-2. I know what direction I want to take this team forward. I want to win this game, use this game as a stepping stone and move forward as a group."

Root has made three ducks in the series and averages 30 but played down suggestions his batting had suffered because of being captain.

"It's been a tough year for batting, tough on both sides," he said. "I've not performed how I would have liked but that's part and parcel of Test cricket."

Despite retaining the Ashes, Australia skipper Tim Paine described the Oval Test as a grand final.

"We are very hungry, we have already spoken a lot about it," he told reporters on Wednesday. "We came here to win the Ashes not just retain them. As a group last week's result was brilliant and we played very well but the guys are aware this match is bigger than that one, this is our grand final."

Explaining the selection of Marsh, he said: "Bringing in Marsh will ease a little bit of the workload on the bowlers at the end of a long series. It was a tough call on Travis Head who has had a great start to his Test career."

Paine wants to continue

Paine also said he had no plans to hand over the reins despite Steve Smith's glorious Ashes and calls from some fans and pundits for his restoration to the Australia captaincy.

Smith is banned from leadership roles until March because of his involvement in a Cape Town ball-tampering scandal last year but he is tipped by some former players and leading cricket writers to regain the captaincy from wicketkeeper Paine after his batting heroics in England.

"I'm enjoying what I'm doing and whilst I can continue to contribute in some way I'll continue to do it," he told Australian media. "I constantly talk to (coach) Justin Langer and (selector) Trevor Hohns about what might happen or how long I might go for, but I think we're all comfortable and we're all on the same page so it's all good."

The 34-year-old suffered a string of finger injuries that interrupted his Test career for seven years and has limited him to 25 Tests to date. "I did miss a lot in, I suppose, the prime years of my cricket career," Paine said. "The positive of that now is that physically I'm in really good condition for my age, and I feel really good after test matches physically. Mentally, it's a different story but it only takes a day to recover from that. While I keep enjoying it, I'll keep doing it."

One of the perks of being an Ashes-winning captain is having friends in high places, and Paine said he now had a direct line to Australian Prime Minister Scott Morrison. "I'm going to save it and I might ring him if we win this one," Paine joked ahead.

Sri Lanka 'reassessing' Pakistan tour after security threat

SEPTEMBER 11

THE SRI Lankan cricket association (SLC) said on Wednesday it was reassessing the security situation in Pakistan after receiving a warning "of a possible terrorist threat" to its team. Sri Lanka is scheduled to play three one-day internationals and three Twenty20 international matches in Pakistan between September 27 and October 9, and 10 key Lankan players have already opted out of the series citing security concerns. SLC, which named weakened ODI and T20I squads for the tour earlier on Wednesday, said in a statement that it had received the warning from the Prime Minister's Office.

"Sri Lanka Cricket today sought the assistance of the Sri Lankan Government to conduct a 'Reassessment' of the security situation in Pakistan ahead of the National Team's planned tour to Pakistan," SLC said. "The warning highlights that the Prime Minister's Office has received reliable information of a possible terrorist threat on the Sri Lankan team while touring Pakistan. Hence, SLC has been advised to take extreme care, and 'reassess' the situation, before embarking on the said tour."

Sri Lanka named Lahiru Thirimanne and Dasun Shanaka its ODI and T20I captains for the tour after incumbents Dimuth Karunaratne and Lasith Malinga decided not to travel. The other players who chose not to play were Angelo Mathews, Niroshan Dickwella, Kusal Perera, Dhananjaya De Silva, Thisara Perera, Akila Dhananjaya, Suranga Lakmal and Dinesh Chandimal. Kusal Mendis was unavailable for selection due to an injury.

Pakistan are looking to host their first test on home soil -- as part of the World Test Championship in December -- since a 2009 militant attack on Sri Lanka's team bus in Lahore left six security personnel and two civilians dead while six players were injured. Pakistan did not host international cricket for six years following the 2009 attack, with the team playing their home matches in the United Arab Emirates, but have hosted teams such as Zimbabwe and West Indies in recent years.

SLC, which named weakened ODI and T20I squads for the tour earlier on Wednesday, said in a statement that it had received the warning from the Prime Minister's Office.

New-look South Africa relying on de Kock, Miller's IPL experience, says van der Dussen

DHARAMSHALA, SEPTEMBER 11

VICE-CAPTAIN Rassie van der Dussen said on Wednesday that the South African team will be relying a lot on IPL regulars Quinton de Kock and David Miller to put up a competitive performance against India in the T20 series beginning here on Sunday. De Kock will captain the team in the absence of Faf du Plessis, who will be in India for the Test series.

Van der Dussen, who impressed in the 50-over World Cup in an otherwise forgettable tournament for the Proteas, has been elevated to vice-captaincy less than a year after he made his international debut.

"Quinton and David have played a lot of cricket in India. We will look to feed off them and ask them a lot of questions about the conditions, the kind of bowlers we would be facing so we can quickly adapt against a strong side like India," van der Dussen said in a media interaction here.

"We've had two tough training sessions since we have been here and two more are coming up. It has been pretty hot and humid, like Durban. It is definitely an advantage that we came here a week before the first game."

Van der Dussen feels captaincy will only make de Kock a better player. "Quinton is one of those guys who leads by example. He doesn't say a lot but when he speaks he says really valuable things. He has won a lot of games for South Africa and everyone respects him for that. I am sure the captaincy band around his arm will bring more out of him."

India hammered South Africa at home in the Test series played four years ago but lost the T20 and ODI series. One of the T20s was at the scenic HPCA Stadium here and South Africa won the game by seven wickets.

"We have had a look at the conditions, Proteas beat India by seven wickets the last time here. It will be a good wicket to bat on. The boundaries are 65 metres all around, they are not really big. We know what India are going to throw at us and we will prepare accordingly," said the 30-year-old from Pretoria.

South Africa have regrouped for the first time since the disappointing World Cup campaign. "It is a fresh start, we have a new coaching staff. We have spoken a lot about in the last few days how we want to be as a team. We have got a few new faces so it always brings the energy up. India are one of the strongest teams in the world, especially in home conditions. They have played some cricket recently against the West Indies. It gives us the advantage of looking at the players and what they are likely to do. We have been off for a while as a team and guys are fresh and raring to go."

South Africa captain Quinton de Kock attends a practice session in Dharamshala on Wednesday. India play South Africa in the first T20I of a three-match series here on Sunday. AP

Footballers face grave threat from London gangs: Arsenal

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 11

TALKS HAVE taken place at Arsenal about the threat posed by gangs targeting footballers after Mesut Ozil and Sead Kolasinac had to fight off knife-wielding men, according to academy head Per Mertesacker.

In an apparent attempted carjacking caught on camera in July, Kolasinac jumped out of a vehicle to confront masked aggressors, who had pulled alongside the vehicle on mopeds. A separate incident led to two men being charged with a public order of offense outside Ozil's house in north London.

"There was a big discussion around gangs in London and the security matters," Mertesacker told The Associated Press. "The major part of what car you drive, what you wear in terms of your jewelry. So you need to be risk-aware in those days that anything can happen at any time. And these are examples you are trying to avoid."

Concerns about their safety led to Ozil and Kolasinac missing games.

"Once these things happen," Mertesacker said, "it is an eye opener to where the world is in terms of poverty around London and how can we make sure that it is not going to happen again."

Especially as Mertesacker, the Arsenal captain before assuming the academy role two years ago, does not want players to become even more distant from fans. "When these things happen, the more fences, the more security guys and the more gates will eventually happen," Mertesacker said. "And that would be very, very sad."

In an interview promoting the launch of his autobiography "Big Friendly German," Mertesacker also addressed Arsenal's quest to return to the Champions League as the team prepares for the third consecutive campaign in the Europa League.

"That is our target this season, there is no doubt about it," Mertesacker said. "If you speak in timeframes _ two or three years, that is (Arsenal) competing for the Premier League title."

That has not been achieved since 2004 and Unai Emery's second season in charge has opened with Arsenal collecting seven points out of a possible 12.

"I think we have a lack of balance right now," Mertesacker said. "Where you feel like, OK we have amazing strikers but that as well need to understand that we need to have a certain compactness. So it's not only about us three (lead) strikers providing an offensive threat. It is about these front three as well, leading the first frontline as being a defensive unit. So I think we need to be cautious of that. No matter how much striking power you have got, you need to have a sense of defensive compactness from everyone. So it's not only the back four who should be judged on how many goals we concede."

Although inevitably there will be focus on David Luiz's contribution. The summer central defensive recruit from Chelsea has had an uneasy start to his Arsenal career, accepting blame for goals being conceded. "I think he will learn from his mistakes on the pitch, but he is very comfortable being at Arsenal," Mertesacker said. "That's what I have been seeing."

"There was a big discussion around gangs in London and the security matters. The major part of what car you drive, what you wear in terms of your jewelry. So you need to be risk-aware in those days that anything can happen at any time. And these are examples you are trying to avoid."

Gurpreet Singh Sandhu's goalkeeping against Qatar kept India afloat against the Asian champions in the World Cup qualifier

MIHIR VASAVDA
NEW DELHI, SEPTEMBER 11

GURPREET SINGH Sandhu laughs out loud. "If my hands start paining just by making saves, then I should die in chullu bhar paani (shame)," he says, the morning after he became only the fourth goalkeeper this year to stop a flashy, scoring-goals-for-fun Qatar side from finding the back of the net, and leading India to a goalless draw at the home of the Asian champions in their 2022 World Cup qualifier.

Qatar, the hosts of the 2022 World Cup, have been operating at a different level in 2019. They put six past North Korea and Afghanistan, four against a formidable UAE and three against Asian giants Japan. Against India, they had 27 shots at goal; 11 on target.

Captain Hassan Al Haydos tried six times - cutting in from wide positions on the left, aiming for the corners. Almoez Ali, the Sudanese-origin forward who is among Asia's best, had a couple of stabs from close range. Abdelkarim Hassan unleashed a missile from roughly 30 yards out. And Portugal-born Qatari international Ro-ro aimed at the bottom left corner from the same distance.

The Asian champions had a go from all angles. But the 27-year-old custodian had them all covered - and on the rare occasions he was beaten, either the goalpost came to his rescue or the strikers were sloppy.

For Sandhu, the pre-match intel came handy. He had studied exactly how, and where, the Qatari strikers prefer to shoot. "And then, you just have to stay ready. Stay on the feet and react," he says. "It was a tough game."

Sandhu's tone understates just how tough it was. India kept a compact shape defensively - which forced Qatar to attack from wider areas - and crowded the box, leaving very little space for the strikers to try anything from inside the penalty area. That forced Qatar to take most of their shots either from sharp, wide angles or outside the box. And Sandhu, who is often accused of conceding soft goals, rarely lets anything in from long range.

When on the back foot against a quality opponent like this, India have often shown a tendency to lose focus and break down towards the later stages of a match - the 2019 Asian Cup group stage game against Bahrain, which followed a similar pattern where India conceded a late penalty to lose the match is an example.

However, to their credit, the players maintained the same intensity throughout, with the defence synchronising perfectly to catch the Qatari forwards offside every time they tried to slip past them. To do that for 90 minutes without losing concentration was refreshing, especially since Qatar were relentless.

The home side had a shot at goal almost every three minutes, but the fact that they spent almost every second of the match around India's goal meant there was no time for Sandhu to rest. "I don't think they missed open goals. The ones that they missed were all offside. So credit where due, our defence held that line and making sure it was difficult for them to score," Sandhu says.

The wall

For Sandhu, being in a situation like this isn't new. There are at least three matches for his club Bengaluru FC where he's faced such bombardment. Against North Korean club 4.25 in the AFC Cup match in Pyongyang, where he - once again - was single-handedly responsible for his team not losing. And then on a pre-season tour to Spain, where Bengaluru played Barcelona 'B' and Villarreal 'B' last year - the two matches he picks that taught him to perform under such pressure.

Against Barcelona 'B', Sandhu repeatedly kept out young striker Carles Perez in the first half before he scored a brace in the second.

An illustration of all shots on target Qatar managed against India during their 2022 World Cup and 2023 Asian Cup joint qualifier on Tuesday. India's compact shape forced Qatar to wider areas of the pitch, while the strategy to crowd the box meant they had to take most of their shots from outside the penalty area. Sandhu's tone understates just how tough it was. India kept a compact shape defensively - which forced Qatar to attack from wider areas - and crowded the box, leaving very little space for the strikers to try anything from inside the penalty area. That forced Qatar to take most of their shots either from sharp, wide angles or outside the box.

Perez has featured in each of Barcelona's games this season and scored his first for the Spanish champions in the 5-2 win over Real Betis just before the international break. "Those two matches helped me learn how to deal with it and how to be in a game like this when you are on the back foot all the time," Sandhu says.

That a goalkeeper should be called into action so frequently, though, raises questions over the team's inferiority in the outfield. It's a trait common to Indian teams across age-groups - even at the under-17 World Cup, India's standout player was a goalkeeper, Dhiraj Moirangthem.

It's a trend that's likely to continue until the country develops midfielders with technical ability and knowledge to control play against teams superior to them.

For that reason - the gulf in class - the unlikely point India got against Qatar was celebrated by the team as if it was a win. It, in fact, is India's best result in a competitive international match since beating UAE in Bangalore in 2001.

After getting spanked by Asia's elite for more than a decade, the team has dished out two eye-catching performances - in the space of five days. The challenge now for the team will be to ensure they do not drop points against Bangladesh and Afghanistan, else all the hard work of Tuesday will mean nothing. "Imagine if we had a win in the bag leaving India and coming here and getting a point. It would've been ideal," Sandhu says. "First two games: one where we could've done better and the other one where everyone expected us to not do well... things just go their own way in football."

'More than happy to get a point'

Doha: He is "more than happy" with the solitary point that the Indian football team snatched by drawing against Asian champion Qatar but coach Igor Stimac says he has told the players to stay grounded as they can't afford complacency during FIFA World Cup Qualifiers. "As a coach, I don't have time to waste in thinking too much higher than it was a few days ago when we lost to Oman. Still today as a coach, of course, I am more than happy to get a point against the reigning champions of Asia," Stimac said at the post-match press conference here. "We need to improve in certain areas, on the other hand, all congratulations not just to my players but also for Qatar. There was excitement in front of both goals, of course. It was a great experience for us." PTI

It is always a big challenge playing Carlsen: Anand

KOLKATA, SEPTEMBER 11

WITH JUST two spots up for grabs, Indian chess wizard Viswanathan Anand on Wednesday said he is confident of sealing his berth in the 2019 Grand Chess Tour Finals to be held in London from November 30 to December 10. The GCT Finals will be held during the London Chess Classic in London and Anand wants to brighten his prospects with yet another perfect finish in the Tata Steel Rapid and Blitz tournament to be held here from November 22 to 26.

Anand, who finished a disappointing tied third in the Sinquefeld Cup last month, needs 13 points from the remaining two legs in Bucharest (November 6-10) and Kolkata to seal a spot in the GCT Finals which carries a prize purse of USD 350,000. "Definitely it's (securing a place in GCT Finals) gettable, but it is still very unpredictable. (Levon) Aronian, me and (Wesley) So all have the same tournaments left. So all of us are fighting for the same 13 points," the five-time former world champion told PTI in an interview from Chennai.

"On top of that, there are other guys, who in the event of a crumble, can get close enough. So, I think 6-7 players are fighting for the last two spots. Hopefully, it will go well for me," he added.

Kolkata has been a happy hunting ground

"No, at the moment. I haven't thought about it. I will see how it goes. I don't think about it a lot."

VISWANATHAN ANAND ON RETIREMENT PLANS

for Anand. From playing his first GM tournament here in 1986 to winning the Tata Steel Blitz title last year, Kolkata holds a special place in the chess wizard's heart. "My performance in the Blitz tournament (last year) was great and that made it extra special. Kolkata has been very special to me and the sport fans are really passionate," he said.

The venue for this year's Tata Steel Rapid and Blitz event is the prestigious National Library, which will host a chess tournament for the first time. "I think the atmosphere there would be electric. National Library as the venue sounds amazing. I'm looking forward to see the final arrangement there. I'm sure they will do a good job. And, obviously

I hope to do well," Anand said.

The competition in Kolkata will see Anand face world champion Magnus Carlsen for the first time in India since his 2013 World Championship defeat in Chennai.

"I have played him (Carlsen) many times in between. I don't think that matters too much either because there would be other players as well. Then I was playing him exclusively. Now there will be 10 participants," said Anand about his upcoming duel with the Norwegian.

"But of course it's always a big challenge playing him. His performance this year has been very good. Generally he starts as a favourite everywhere. But you just play your best and see what's you're up to. Ding (Liren) has been very impressive too," he added.

Anand won one match and drew 10 at the classical leg of the GCT in the Sinquefeld Cup in St Louis. The Indian, however, failed to convert some positional advantages there, especially against GM Ding Liren.

But Anand now wants to shift his focus on the FIDE Chess.com Grand Swiss in the Isle of Man from October 8 to 22, where the winner will qualify for the 2020 Candidates Tournament. Anand pulled out of the ongoing World Cup in Khanty-Mansiysk and is currently enjoying a break with his family at his home in Chennai. "I had a chance to rest, otherwise I would already have started playing (in World Cup). I thought that I might be tired so I took the decision to skip this one," he said.

On his preparation for the Isle of Man event, which is expected to be the strongest Swiss-system tournament, Anand said: "It's still a while away but I am getting ready for it. There are too many variables. I don't know whom I'll be paired with and with what colours. So you just have to go, be ready to take your chances and see what happens. You can't plan and switch on."

Anand, who will turn 50 on December 11, also ruled out retirement plans anytime soon. "No, at the moment. I haven't thought about it. I will see how it goes. I don't think about it a lot," he concluded.

Mary Kom, Praneeth in Tops list

Boxer Mary Kom, young shooter Yashaswini Singh Deswal and shuttler Sai Praneeth were among 12 top sportspersons who were included in the Target Olympic Podium Scheme (TOPS) of the government. The 6-time world champion Mary Kom was among 10 boxers who were brought into the TOPS scheme for 2020 Olympics by the Sports Authority of India's Mission Olympic Cell which met in New Delhi. Amit Panghal (men's 52 kg), Sonia Chahal (women's 57 kg), Neeraj (women's 57 kg), Nikhat Zareen (women's 51 kg), Kavinder Singh Bisht (men's 57 kg), Lovlina Borgohain (women's 69 kg), Vikas Krishan (men's 75 kg), Shiva Thapa (men's 63 kg) and Manish Kaushik (men's 63 kg) were the other nine boxers added to the TOPS list.

Ghosh wins two shooting titles at trials

Mehuli Ghosh won both the senior and junior women's 10m air rifle title for the second day in a row at the National Shooting Trials (T7) in New Delhi on Wednesday. Mehuli had won the same two events at the Dr Karni Singh Shooting Range on Tuesday in the sixth trial as well. The diminutive teenager, who has seven international medals to her name over the last two years, clinched the title in a quality field comprising the world's top three shooters to win the senior final with a score of 251.9. She then went on to win the junior final with a score of 252.7, just 0.2 off teammate and world number one Apurvi Chandel's finals world record score of 252.9.

Devi, Tamanna enter semifinals

Manipur's Ambeshori Devi (57kg) and Haryana's Tamanna (48kg) entered the semifinals to be assured of medals at the 3rd Junior Women's National Boxing Championships in Rohtak. Both Tamanna and Ambeshori Devi had won medals at the Black Forest Cup in June and they continued their fine form in the domestic circuit as well. Ambeshori completely dominated her quarter-final bout against Mizoram's Naom Chingsannuami en route to her 5-0 win while Tamanna prevailed over Delhi's Anjali by an identical scoreline.

India topped the medal tally with 10 gold, 8 silver and 7 bronze medals.

Ronaldo wins fourth gold at Track Asia Cup

Ronaldo Laitonjam won his fourth gold of the meet as India picked up three medals on the concluding day to emerge overall champions in the Track Asia Cup cycling competition here on Wednesday. India topped the medal tally with 10 gold, 8 silver and 7 bronze medals as the tournament came to an end at the IGI Sports Complex here. The home team clinched 2 gold and 1 bronze on final day on Wednesday. Uzbekistan finished overall second with 4 gold and 3 silver while Malaysia secured third place with 4 gold and 1 silver. Ronaldo once again hogged the limelight by winning a gold in junior men's Keirin event, his fourth of the meet. The junior world champion team member Ronaldo had earlier collected a gold each in sprint, 1km time trial and team sprint junior events. In keirin, out of five rounds, cyclists have to win through their speed in the last 2.5 rounds and Ronaldo finished ahead of Kazakhstan riders Arlanbek and Alexandr Safarov who won silver and bronze respectively. "This is the best ever performance of my career and in every event I improved my timing, this is most important and with the blessings of my family, I achieved it," Ronaldo said after winning his fourth gold.

Valencia sack coach Marcelino

Marcelino has been sacked as Valencia coach after an indifferent start to the season, the Spanish La Liga club said. The 54-year-old, who won the Copa del Rey and secured Champions League football last season, leaves after two campaigns at the helm. "Valencia told Marcelino Garcia Toral that he is no longer first team coach," a club statement said. "The club would like to thank him for his work and dedication during his time at our entity and wish him success for the future." The departure had been mooted in what turned out to be a tumultuous pre-season for the club, with local media reporting the coach was not happy with owner Peter Lim over transfer policy.

Fifa inspects cities for U-17 Women WC

FIFA, the world governing body for football, has inspected five cities which are likely to host matches of the U-17 Women's World Cup, to be held in India next year. In March, FIFA President Gianni Infantino had announced that India would host the U-17 Women's World Cup in 2020. "As of now we have visited and inspected five host cities that include Kolkata, Bhuvaneshwar, Ahmedabad, Goa and Navi Mumbai. These were the cities that we had inspected (however) there is a lot of interest from other cities as well," tournament director Roma Khanna told reporters in Mumbai.

Mladenovic beats Garcia at Zhengzhou

Kristina Mladenovic won an all-French battle against eighth seed Caroline Garcia 7-5 6-2 to reach the quarter-finals at the inaugural Zhengzhou Open on a rain-interrupted Wednesday. Mladenovic, the world number 49, kept things tight against Garcia, who is ranked 18 places higher, winning 71% of her first serve points and hitting 17 winners. Garcia struck two more winners than her opponent but also made 33 unforced errors to Mladenovic's 19 as she slumped to her second defeat of the year against her compatriot. "It was an extremely difficult day for everybody," Mladenovic said in an on-court interview, after rain delayed play for three hours during the day session. "I'm very pleased with my performance tonight."

Peru shock Brazil, ending 17-match unbeaten run

SEPTEMBER 11

LUIS ABRAM scored his first international goal on a header in the 85th minute, and Peru ended Brazil's 17-game unbeaten streak since last year's World Cup with a 1-0 victory on Tuesday night.

Peru shockingly pulled out only its second win over Brazil in 21 matches after Abram slipped into the box and nodded home Yoshimar Yotun's free kick.

Abram is a 23-year-old defender who plays professionally in Argentina for mid-table Velez Sarsfield, but he managed to outscore a star-studded Brazilian line-up including Bayern Munich's Philippe Coutinho, Liverpool's Roberto Firmino and second-half substitutes Neymar, Vinicius and Fabinho.

Peru beat Brazil for only the fifth time in the nations' 47 meetings. The game also was a rematch of the Copa America final, won 3-1 by Brazil on July 7.

Neymar came on in the 63rd minute along with Liverpool's Fabinho, and Real Madrid's Vinicius joined them in the 74th minute. The stars made a late push, but couldn't level the match in front of a lively crowd of 32,287 at the venerable Coliseum in Los Angeles. Neymar scored a goal and assisted on another during Brazil's 2-2 draw with Colombia in Miami last Friday, but he was on coach Tite's bench to start in Los Angeles.

He was unable to score his 62nd international goal, which will match Ronaldo's career total for the Seleccion. Neymar's tumultuous summer ended with the superstar still at Paris St. Germain despite extensive negotiations to return to Barcelona. Although PSG took disciplinary action against him for missing training in July, he is expected to return after the international break.

Both teams had chances to score in the opening half, but couldn't convert. Brazil also had a scary moment when Casemiro jumped above David Neres for a header, and the teammates came down holding their heads from the collision. Casemiro returned with a bandage on his head.

The Internazionale striker took advantage of shocking defending to fire three angled shots past Mexico goalkeeper Guillermo Ochoa in the 17th, 22nd and 39th minutes. Leandro Paredes scored from the penalty spot in the 33rd minute. Argentina dropped the pace in the second period but still faced little resistance from an untidy Mexico who did not manage a shot on target throughout the game.

CR7, the goal machine

Ronaldo shells four goals past Lithuania in Euro qualifier to notch up his 12th hat-trick for his country

VILNIUS, SEPTEMBER 11

PORTUGAL CAPTAIN Cristiano Ronaldo took his international tally to 93 goals when he scored four times to give the European champions a 5-1 win away to Lithuania in their Euro 2020 qualifier on Tuesday. Playing in his 161st international, the 34-year-old notched his eighth hat-trick for his country and the 54th of his remarkable career to help Portugal through what had threatened to turn into a frustrating evening.

Unheralded midfielder William Carvalho completed the rout in stoppage time as Portugal stayed second in Group B with eight points, five behind leaders Ukraine with one game in hand. Serbia are a further point behind in third after a 3-1 win in Luxemburg. "I scored one goal against Serbia and four today and what I want most is to continue like this," said Ronaldo, who converted an early penalty and then added three second-half goals.

Portugal coach Fernando Santos said: "Ronaldo is the best player in the world, this is clear and unmistakable proof". Lithuania, bottom with one point, missed an early chance when Vyktintas Slivka fired over from close range and they quickly paid the price when Markus Palionis handled a Joao Felix cross and Ronaldo put away the spot kick in the fifth minute.

Lithuania goalkeeper Ernestas Setkus made an excellent save to prevent Edvinas Girdvainis turning the ball into his own net but Vytautas Andriuskevicius then grabbed a surprise equaliser, rising above his marker to head home from a corner in the 28th.

Ronaldo set up good chances for Felix and Bernardo Silva, which were wasted, after the break before taking matters into his own hands. Just as Portugal were beginning to show signs of frustration, Ronaldo produced a low shot which bobbed twice in front of Setkus in the 62nd minute. The Lithuania goalkeeper got his hand to it, but it hit his head and bounced into the net.

Three minutes later, Ronaldo was left free in the area to sweep home Bernardo Silva's cross and Silva also provided the pass for Ronaldo to sidefoot his fourth 11 minutes later. Carvalho's goal, his fourth in 60 games, was a fitting reward for a player who keeps the Portugal midfield ticking over without getting much attention.

Score for England

England's march towards the Euro 2020 finals continued but not quite in the manner they might have expected as they beat a brave and enterprising Kosovo side 5-3 in an extraordinary Group A qualifier at St Mary's Stadium on Tuesday. Valon Berisha gave 120th-ranked Kosovo the lead after 35 seconds but England hit back seven minutes later through Raheem Sterling's header and the rampant hosts led 5-1 at the interval with a double for teenager Jadon Sancho.

Kosovo, surprisingly second in the group just a point behind England at kickoff, were not about to depart the biggest night in their short footballing history quietly though and exposed worrying weaknesses in England's defence. Within 10 minutes of the restart they had scored twice through Berisha and a penalty by Vedat Muriqi, rattling England and leaving manager Gareth Southgate frowning.

Harry Kane, who scored England's second goal, had a penalty saved by Arijanet Muric and Sterling then hit the post but Kosovo were still going forward until the final whistle and Bersant Celina went close to making it 5-4. England, who conceded three at home for the first time since 2012, lead the group with a maximum 12 points having scored 19 goals in the process. Kosovo dropped to third with eight points, one behind the Czech Republic who beat Montenegro 3-0 away.

Despite their defeat Kosovo, who had been on a 15-match unbeaten run, will still believe they can qualify for their first tournament finals, just four years after gaining international status from world soccer's governing body FIFA. Southgate had warned beforehand of Kosovo's threat and it took only 35 seconds to materialise, albeit from a dreadful mistake by England defender Michael Keane. Without looking, he played a casual pass across his area and the gift was accepted by Muriqi who intercepted and played in Berisha to clip a fine finish past goalkeeper Jordan Pickford.

That lit the touchpaper for a stunning opening half in which England's attacking play was devastating. The home side were level seven minutes later with Keane making up for his error by heading Ross Barkley's corner across goal for Sterling to nod a real poacher's goal -- his sixth in four Euro 2020 qualifying games. So often forced to break down massed defences, England were relishing the wide open spaces left by an attack-minded Kosovo.

Coman inspires France

France forward Kingsley Coman scored his third goal in two matches as he inspired the hosts to a 3-0 win against Andorra in their Euro 2020 Group H qualifier on Tuesday. The pacy Coman, who got a double in Saturday's 4-1 win over Albania, put

He needs just 16 goals to surpass the all-time international record which belongs to Ali Daei, who scored 109 goals in 149 caps for Iran. At his rate of scoring, he would take only 28 games to beat the Iranian legend.

Didier Deschamps's favourite substitute at the 16-team championship next year, should France qualify.

"I'm not going to complain that I have an extra solution," Deschamps said of Coman, who missed out on the 2018 World Cup in a year marred by injuries.

"He was already with us at Euro 2016, and he was already performing. What he's got now is an eye for goal and he showed it with Bayern and in these two games."

Coman, 23, scored one goal and set up two in three Bundesliga games this season. His three goals in a 4-1 win against Albania and the 3-0 defeat of Andorra took his France tally to four goals in 19 games.

Season starts with dust yet to settle on old one

IT IS only 16 days since Rory McIlroy was crowned FedEx Cup champion but players are already gearing up for the new U.S. PGA Tour season with the opening event, the Greenbrier Classic, kicking off in West Virginia on Thursday.

With the calendar even more crowded thanks to the golf event at the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, the Classic will be the first of 49 official FedEx Cup events, of which 11 will be played between now and late November as part of the so-called 'wraparound' season.

World number 10 Bryson DeChambeau heads the field in West Virginia, while the spotlight will also be on 2018 U.S. amateur champion Viktor Hovland as the Norwegian makes his debut as a Tour member after a series of impressive results since turning pro in June. The event will be followed by four more in the United States before the Tour crosses the Pacific for a three-event Asian swing with tournaments in South Korea, China and the new Zozo Championship in Japan, which replaces Kuala Lumpur's CIMB Classic on the calendar.

McIlroy and Tiger Woods are among a host of top names already signed up to play in Japan. The top American and international players will be active until just before Christmas due to the Dec. 12-15 Presidents Cup at Royal Melbourne in Australia, and after a short break the 2020 campaign will roll on at a relentless pace.

From late February through late August there is a top event pretty much every other week, with the July 30-Aug. 2 Olympic golf competition jammed in just two weeks after the British Open, and two weeks before the start of the FedEx Cup playoffs.

The new season will also mark the introduction of random testing of players' drivers to ensure they are legal. The game's international governing body, the R&A, tested drivers at the British Open in July and found Xander Schauffele's to be non-conforming, but the PGA Tour until now has not tested.

Yet to be unveiled by the Tour is a new pace-of-play policy, which is being reviewed following complaints about slow play and after a video of DeChambeau taking more than two minutes to line up a putt at a tournament in August went viral.

While world number one Brooks Koepka and number two McIlroy will have heavy schedules Woods is again expected to again carry a lighter load. He played only three non-majors since winning the Masters in April, and recent knee surgery suggests he will be just as sparing in his appearances in the new season.

Nicklaus Barnes dies aged 74

Brian Barnes, a larger than life character who once beat Jack Nicklaus twice on the same day in the Ryder Cup, died on Monday aged 74, the European Tour announced.

Barnes, who once famously marked his ball with a beer can, was born in England but represented Scotland internationally.

Though he won nine times on the European Tour, he will forever be remembered for taking down 18-times major champion Nicklaus twice in quick succession in Ryder Cup singles. Barnes played in six consecutive Ryder Cups from 1969-79, with his crowning achievement coming in the 1975 event at Laurel Valley in Pennsylvania. The Ryder Cup back then was not the fiercely-competitive affair it is today, because the U.S. routinely dominated.
